Plain Tactful English
China, Russia, Japan
Three Ominous Words
They Mean Danger

Current Events
By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1925, by Star Co.

THE USE of plain English is an art, and such plain English is visible from the window of this express train, as it rushes through Clinton, a thriving settlement in South Carolina.

A big sign beside the highway reads:

"Loafers, scalawags and bums don't like Clinton."

"The heart knoweth his own bitterness."

The scalawag recognizes himself and passes on rapidly in this warm-hearted South: they let you know just how they feel. Their hospitality is overwhelming, and so is the other thing.

OUR PROVINCIAL STATESMEN, shuddering at the words "Communism" and "Bolshevism," will have no relations with the Russian government.

Washington says to Russia: "You must not presume to govern your country in your own way. We shall have nothing to do with you, as long as you insist that the common man is more important than the dollar he earns. And, anyhow, we won't have anything to do with you until you pay your late Czar's debts to our bankers."

OTHER COUNTRIES are less particular. Italy, France, England, say: "We don't like Russia's government, but we want Russian business." And they make commercial treaties with Russia.

MOST INTERESTING of all to this country are treaties with Russia recently made by China and Japan.

Even our kind of statesmen ought to see a meaning and a danger in an alliance that includes Japan, Russia and China. Russia alone occupies one-sixth of the globe's surface. China has at least five hundred million inhabitants. They can fight, are not afraid to die; you can teach them to run a flying machine, and drop bombs.

Japan is the equal of any nation on earth in manufacturing ingenuity, in fighting, and in many other ways.

JAPAN HATES the United States because we refuse to let Japan regulate our immigration laws. Russia hates the United States on general principles, foolishly, because of her communistic doctrines that won't last, but with some just cause, in view of the fact that we insist on telling her what kind of government she must have, and seek to boycott her.

WHAT DO the statesmen in Washington think would happen if China, Japan and Russia should form a little combination to teach the United States a lesson?

As to the ultimate result, there isn't any doubt, but unfortunately as the first and immediate result, there isn't any doubt either. Those first results would be very painful.

THIS COUNTRY is as thoroughly disarmed as Germany, at this moment. Men marching up and down with guns don't count in war any more. Battleships and silly coast defence guns mean nothing.

If Asia, united with Russia, should attack the United States, it wouldn't be with battleships sailing up close to be fired at by our coast defence guns.

If Asia and Russia ever come our way they will come through the air. And this country, according to the testimony of our own officers, hasn't got all told more than 20 fighting flying machines, ready for action.

Only the other day Russia bought 100 of them from one of the best European makers, Fokker. Japan is turning out 500 fighting airplanes every month. Twenty-five times as many as we have altogether. She has big freight ships and battleships on which to send her fighting airships within striking distance of our coast, or they could fly here in sixty hours.

MR. C. H. K. CURTIS remarks, with editorial solemnity, that Russia, Japan and China, united by treaties,

CUT 'PHONE WIRES BEFORE ENTERING GLOUCESTER HOUSE

Gloucester, Jan. 30.—Louis Cohen, well-to-do cattle dealer, his father-in-law, also Louis Cohen, and Mrs. Cohen imprisoned in rooms of their home at No. 46 Poplar street, by two bandits who forced entrance to the house today, broke down the locked doors and telephoned the story of a daring midnight burglary to the police station.

Two men descended from an automobile in front of the Cohen home on the outskirts of the city just before midnight. They rapped on the front door. Young Louis Cohen, aroused from slumbers, went to the door, opened it and was confronted

YOUTH SPURNS GIRL AS 'BRIDE OF NIGHT'

Confronted by a pretty young woman who asserts she is his wife, deserted in a Billerica camp a few hours after their elopement and secret marriage a year ago, James Randolph of Waltham, astounded police officials today when he shouted, staring straight at the woman:

"It's a lie. I never saw this woman before in my life"

The dramatic scene occurred in the Waltham police station, where the woman, Mrs. George Cormier of No. 22 Woerd avenue, appeared to ask a warrant charging George Cormier, alias "James Randolph," with non-support.

Young Randolph was summoned to the police station, where the girl had been secreted in an office off the guardroom.

When the young man had taken a

2 DEATHS IN STORM; DRIFTS STALL TRAINS

Lost in the snow "somewhere in the Mohawk Valley" crack trains from the West over the Boston & Albany lines were hours late in reaching Boston, when they did reach here.

While the eastern part of the State suffered the loss of trolley service and other wheel traffic was tied up, the western part of the State was fairly staggered with a blanket of snow.

Trains from Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis and Buffalo became marooned and during the hours when many sleeping cars pull into Boston from the West, only one was

$100,000 DAMAGE IN SALEM FIRE

Salem, Jan. 30.—Flames that swept the Perley block, No. 252 Essex street, resulted in injuries to several firemen today and damaged the structure to the extent of $100,000.

Two alarms, general in Salem, were sounded for the blaze, which was aided by a high wind, and aid was called from Peabody and Beverly.

Hoseman Peter Norton and Daniel Hodgkins were overcome by smoke while battling the flames, and Hoseman William McGrath was badly cut by broken glass. Several other smoke-eaters received minor hurts.

The three-story block is in the heart of Salem's business district. The storm was raging when the flames first were noticed, and two alarms were immediately ordered sounded.

Arrived at the scene of the fire, Hoseman Frank Hale walked into an opening in the sidewalk and tumbled down to the basement, escaping with only a shaking up.

Starting, it is believed, in the Page & Shaw candy store on the first floor, the fire swept upward through the second and third floors, which eventually caved in.

The law offices of Michael L. Sullivan and the offices of Charles H. Fleming, insurance; Dr. Henry A. Barry, Dr. Sigmund Miller, Attorney Max Goldberg and the Payne Art Shop were destroyed.

MARY'S LITTLE LAMB IN JAIL

MARY GARDENA

Picture at top shows Mary Gardena of Somerville and her little lamb, which lost itself in an attempt to follow Mary, not to school, but to a neighborhood store, and finally, to its shame, wound up in the police station at East Cambridge.

There being no school because of the storm, Mary's little lamb changed the booking a bit and followed Mary to the store.

This explains simply and in a few brief words the predicament that Mary's lamb finally found him—her—oh well, itself, in, some hours later when it cavorted in the East Cambridge police station under arrest.

The lamb, not being familiar with the store route, where it knew every inch of the trail to school, naturally became lost. And becoming lost, of course it become confused, it became excited and becoming excited it went practically nutty in a manner of speaking. In such little steps our whole life is plotted—amen.

MARY LAMENTS LOSS.

But Mary Gardena, little Somerville girl, couldn't find her playmate and told the whole story of the losing to the lamb's owner, Salvatore Colorotollo, who lives with the lamb at No. 22 Porter street, on the Cambridge-Somerville line.

But meanwhile "little Eva" the lamb, wasn't acting lamblike at all. At least not like a good lamb, as lambs go.

Eva had ambled out on the tracks

BELIEVES LEGINSKA WITH SECRET FRIEND

Miss Ethel Leginska, world-famous pianist, composer and orchestra director, who disappeared in New York Monday, while a society audience awaited her appearance at Carnegie Hall, is recovering from a serious mental breakdown in the home of a mysterious friend whose identity is not known to others of her acquaintances.

This is the belief held today by Mrs. Allen Hubbard of No. 15 Montvale road, Newton Centre, an intimate friend of the musician.

"I am convinced that Leginska is the victim of a serious physical and mental breakdown—the aftermath of an attack of "nerves" she suffered while a guest at my home during her last visit to Boston," declared Mrs. Hubbard.

"Miss Leginska, but for my presence on anotehr occasion, would have fled to an obscure place to rest when she was near complete collapse from nervous strain.

"When she came to Boston on January 17 she was a guest at my home here. She was greatly depressed. I feared then that she was near a breakdown. Coming home late at night she persisted in playing the piano, often until nearly daylight, so nervous and excited was she at the time. Then to add to her worries, Leginska fretted much over the disappearance of a prized musical composition she missed while giving a concert in this city.

Mrs. Hubbard added that she received a telegraph from Lucille Oliver, the composer's secretary, today,

WRECKED S-48 CREW SAVED; 36 TAKEN OFF DIVER HALF FROZEN

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 30.—Half frozen from exposure, choking with the fumes of chlorine gas and with their clothing ice-crusted, the thirty-six officers and men of the wrecked submarine S48 were saved from the undersea boat today.

Three of the men were in such a plight that they had to be carried aboard the rescuers' lifeboat from the submarine which crashed in the storm on dread Whaleback Reef, edging the mouth of the Piscataqua River leading into Portsmouth Harbor.

From the lifeboats of the Wallis Sands and Wood Island lifesaving stations, the submarine men who had missed death by scant inches were transferred to a tug and taken to Fort Stark, where they were thawed

CHALIAPIN PAYS $25 FOR 2 OPERA SEATS

Even topnotch singers of the Chicago Opera Company like Feodor Chaliapin, the world's leading bass, has to pay to hear the company sing during its Boston engagement. He paid $25 to hear last night's performance of "Tannhauser" with a Brookline friend. The "specs" "got" him for this amount.

Having invited the friend to hear the opera, the marvelous Russian basso asked his secretary to call up the Boston Opera House and reserve two seats.

"All sold out," came the reply.

"Call up again and say that I wish to attend with a friend," said Chaliapin.

When the Russian singer stepped up to the box office he was told there was a charge of $25 for the seats. It was explained that seats were secured from a speculator.

"I would have been willing to pay $100 for the seats," said Chaliapin.

DEMPSEY WEDDING ENDS KEARNS PACT

(Copyright, 1925, by I. N. S.)

Los Angeles, Jan. 30 (I.N.S.)—The greatest alliance known to the sport world, that of Jack Dempsey and Jack Kearns, will come to an end on May 20, this year, when Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, leads Estelle Taylor, film star, to the altar and takes her for his bride.

Such was the exclusive announcement from Dempsey today as he made known his plans for the future.

"I will never fight gain," the champion declared. "That is one of the arrangements Miss Taylor and I have agreed upon. My ring career is ended and with it ends my contract with Jack Kearns who has been my manager for more than eight years."

"Mr. Kearns and I will continue our ownership in the hotels we have here for the present.

GASTON MEANS GETS 2 YEARS IN BRIBERY

New York, Jan. 30.—Gaston B. Means, former Department of Justice agent, convicted by a Federal Court jury today of conspiring to bribe government officials, was fined $10,000 and sentenced to serve a two-year penitentiary term.

Thomas B. Felder, Means' attorney, who was convicted on a similar charge, was fined $10,000. The sentences were imposed by Federal Judge Lindley after the jury had recommended clemency. The court denied motions to set aside the verdict on the ground that it was contrary to the weight of evidence.

Felder expressed confidence that the conviction would be reversed on appeal and declared his innocence of the charge.

Means' counsel said an appeal would also be filed in his case. Means is already under a sentence of two years and a fine of $10,000 for violation of the Volstead act, but today's sentence, on the motion of Hiram C. Todd, special U. S. Attorney, is not to be concurrent with the previous one.

out and fed before being taken to the Navy Yard.

RESTS ON SAND.

The wrecked submarine, after being blown off the jagged reef and through the breakwater aperture, rests on the sand of the inner harbor, partly overhanging the channel.

A hole is stove in her hull. It was decided to send workmen from the Portsmouth Navy Yard to patch this opening before pulling the craft into deep water.

Lieutenant-Commander Stewart E. Bray of New London was in charge of the submarine when she struck on the reef. The only other officer known to be on board was Lieutenant W. A. Swanton of Ohio.

The submarine, since her shift into Little Harbor, has a heavy list and is partly submerged.

This is taken to mean one of two things: either the seams of the submarine's hull have been opened and her compartments are flooded, or she is stuck in the mud of the harbor.

The inrushing salt water coming in contact with the batteries of the submarine released clouds of poisonous chlorine gas, which could not be long survived.

The wireless plant of the submarine was dead for many hours. The only signals received by the watchers on shore were hand signals. During the early morning gloom, pocket flashlights were used by those aboard the submarine. Later, semaphore flag signals were used, but these could barely be discerned in the blinding snow.

The submarine was dashed on the rocks as she was entering the harbor. The craft, a sister submarine S-51, and the submarine convoy tender, Chewink, had journeyed from the New London submarine base, with the Portsmouth Navy Yard as their destination.

The S-51 and the Chewink, battling the storm, made the inner harbor safely. The S-48, lost in the gale and snowstorm, was carried full on the Whaleback ledge, the most dangerous spot on New Hampshire's short coastline.

The wrecked submarine used her wireless as long as current was available. Only faintly the SOS calls were recorded at the Fort Adams receiving station.

Then the lights of the submarine were suddenly dark and the wireless ceased.

From the point where the S-48 was first driven ashore, to the passable roads leading to the nearest coast guard station, is a distance of more than five miles.

Throughout the night, tractors and snowplows battered through the snow banks in an effort to reach a point on shore where a breeches buoy could be set up.

WORK IN VAIN.

When daylight came, the eager watchers found that their work had been largely in vain—that the new position of the submarine made it necessary to fight their way to a new place close to the water line.

All available men were sent from the Portsmouth Navy Yard to aid the coast guardsmen.

Small boats were hauled up on tractors.

Officers and men of the Charlestown Navy Yard are convinced that the submarine S-48, which is being pounded to pieces on the rocks just off the harbor of Portsmouth, N. H. is pursued by a jinx.

The S-48, with fifty-one officers and men aboard, sank without warning to the bottom of Long Island Sound in seventy feet of water on the night of December 7, 1921.

The submarine, still in the custody of its constructors, the Lake Submarine Company, was on a test run preliminary to being accepted by the navy when the first accident happened.

WORKMAN BLAMED.

The accident, which was said to have been due to a workman carelessly leaving a manhole cover off, between the engine room and the ballast tank, was accompanied by a number of thrilling incidents before the craft was sufficiently raised at one end to allow everyone on board to escape through a torpedo tube.

The boat submerged nose downward, but quickly began to fill with water through the manhole and engine room and went to the bottom. The crew worked for hours to lighten her, confining the water that had got into her in her after compartment by means of bulkheads, then fighting death by chlorine gas, and conquering by closing the battery compartment.

DUMMY TORPEDOES.

A message asking help was painted on two dummy torpedoes, which was sent to the surface. The lubricating oil tank was emptied and portable lead ballast forward was carried aft and dropped through the sounding-machine tube. The bow of the craft gradually rose as a result of lightening that end, till she stood nearly on end.

At 4:30 a. m. the commander called for a volunteer to go out through the torpedo tube and Peter Dunn, a former navy man, took off his clothes, and taking the end of a rope entered the tube.

SHOT FROM TUBE.

The inner door of the tube was closed, the outer door opened and Dunn emerged into the icy water, swimming about in the dark, till he was able to climb by an anchor chain to the bow, which he found four feet out of water. Leaving the rope secured to the torpedo tube and the deck, he returned inside.

A number of men then went through the tube, up to the bow, and burned mattresses as signals of distress. As the last mattress was burning a tug which had been attracted by it responded and took all hands to New York.

The craft was soon afterword raised without difficulty.

DEMANDED MONEY.

"Now keep your mouth shut and hand over the dough," they demanded of Cohen. When he replied that he had no money they forced him against a wall in the lower hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Cohen, hearing loud voices, rushed down into the hallway in their night clothing. They were also lined up against the wall, then marched into bedrooms on the second floor and locked in.

The burglars then ransacked the house. Their loot comprised a diamond ring and other small articles of jewelry and $2 in cash.

CUT PHONE WIRES.

After cutting the telephone wires and crippling the ignition system of Cohen's automobile they disappeared in the raging storm.

Shortly after 4 o'clock this morning young Cohen battered down the door of the room, where he was confined. He released the older folks, then ran to a telephone and informed a friend of the robbery. The latter reported to the police.

Cohen believes he knows one of the men.

ALL'S WELL! CAPTAIN HOPPE'S DOG IS BACK!

"Teddy," family pet dog of Captain Bernard J. Hoppe of the Boston traffic police, has returned home. The dog, a brindle French bull, which either strayed away or was stolen last Monday, strolled nonchalantly into the Hoppe home, No. 21 Mattakeset street, Mattapan, today. Happiness reigns there now among Captain Hoppe's four grandchilrden, with whom the dog was a great "pal."

Captain Hoppe said today that he thought the dog's return was due to the publicity given by the Boston Evening American of the dog's disappearance. He declared that in his opinion the dog had been stolen and on reading the article in the American those who had the dog let him go.

sent the door opened and the girl took a stand facing Randolph.

"That's him—that's George Cormier, my husband," she said quietly.

It was then that Randolph gave utterance to his dramatic denial.

Mrs. Cormier told the police that she and George Cormier, who had been employed at McLean Hospital in Waverley, eloped from the institution a year ago.

"We were married in Allston," she said, "by a man who said he was a minister and wore a long black coat. Two friends of Cormier, a man and a woman, were witnesses.

"Then in his automobile we motored to a camp at Billerica, where we were to pass our honeymoon. Cormier took the car and left me alone after only one night in the camp. I haven't seen him since.

"I remained at the camp all day waiting for George to return.

"Darkness came and he had not appeared. Then I threw myself on the bed and cried. It was late that night before I was convinced that George had deserted me. I left the camp and went home."

According to Mrs. Cormier, a baby, born to her after the secret marriage, died a few months ago. She seeks to have Cormier aid her in paying doctor's bills incurred during the illness of the baby.

Mrs. Cormier told the police that recently she learned that her husband was in Waltham. On information furnished by her, Randolph was located and called to the police station.

YOUTH TO FACE COURT.

Investigation by the police disclosed that the girl had undoubtedly been employed at the McLean Hospital. A George Cormier, who worked there, left at the same time that the girl disappeared.

The authorities are inclined to the theory that the woman was made the victim of a "mock marriage." She is unable to locate the witnesses to the Allston ceremony or the minister "with the black coat." Her marriage certificate likewise is missing.

Randolph stoutly maintains he is the victim of mistaken identity. He will be given a hearing in district court tomorrow. Meanwhile police are continuing their investigation of the case.

SENATE DELAYS PRAYER AND SOLON SAVES RECORD

So that Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River might continue his record of never having missed an opening prayer, the Senate delayed today's session eight minutes. At the end of the waiting period McLane, who is serving his fourcenth term in the upper branch, was in his seat. He expressed his thanks to the members of their consideration in assisting him to a perfect score.

AWAIT AUTOPSY ON MAN FOUND SHOT IN MAINE

Lewiston, Me., Jan. 30.—Authorities of Androscoggin County await the outcome of an autopsy on the body of an unidentified man found on the ice of the river at Durham. A bullet hole in the chest led the authorities to believe the man had been murdered, but they said they had no clew to the slayer or cause of the crime.

able to make delayed connections.

The storm that swept New England melted away under today's sun, but not until two deaths had been recorded, wires had been brought down, cellars flooded and catchbasins frozen in a quick drop in temperature following the storm

Charles A. Oliver, 65, of St. Albans, Vt., dropped dead while shoveling snow in front of his home. He was paying teller of the Franklin County Savings Bank and Trust Company.

TRAIN HELD UP.

Stymied by a huge snow drift only half a mile east of Dover, N. H., station, the early "Navy Yard" train from Dover to Portsmouth was forced to back along the rails to the station and wait two hours for a snowplow to break through.

Mrs. Calliope Mavroides of No. 10 Kirtland street, Lynn, fell dead from heart failure in the Lynn Classical High School after walking a mile through the storm.

Through trains on the Boston & Maine were from an hour and fifteen minutes to two hours and twenty minutes late today, much of the tardiness being handed over by the connecting roads from Montreal and St. John, N. B.

From Boston to Portland a flat fall of from five to eight inches of snow was reported by the railroad, but with huge drifts. North of Concord, N. H., the fall was nearly a foot. All lines are open, however, except at Wolfboro, where a huge plow bucked the drifts all morning.

Advices from west of the B. & M. lines in New York State were that heavy snow had so clogged transportation that freight movements were deemed inadvisable.

The Twentieth Century Limited and all trains from the West due in New York before noon were held up near Utica, N. Y., by snowdrifts, some of which were nine feet deep.

In Springfield and at Manchester, N. H., trolley lines were buried under huge drifts and on many lines no cars ran. On the highways in the western part of the State auto traffic was reported impossible.

Thousands of mill and shoe workers in Manchester and Nashua, N. H., walked to work through the drifts.

Had the snow not turned to rain in Boston, the Hub today would have had thirty inches of snow, according to the Weather Bureau. Portland, Me., had twenty-six inches and its precipitation was only five-sixths that of Boston

Schools in Lexington and Arlington were closed, because it was necessary to spend all the morning session drying the feet and clothing of children who had slipped into deep slush.

Doctors Work 20 Hours a Day in the Grip Epidemic

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 30.—A fall of 26 inches of snow left Syracuse and Central New York snowbound today, practically cut off except for telephone and telegraphic communication.

Suffering an epidemic of grip, which has kept physicians working twenty hours a day for the last several days, the city faced a real crisis today as the doctors found it impossible to use automobiles.

The most pathetic story was that of William J. Omilanowicz, who lived within two blocks of a hospital. The man's two-months-old infant son became ill. An hour passed and no physician had arrived. Omilanowicz wrapped the infant in a shawl and went out into the storm.

Passing through drifts, he fell twice, but managed to stagger into the hospital. But the child was dead. Later two physicians appeared at the family home, each having made the trip as quickly as it was possible.

Several physicians made calls by using skiis and snowshoes.

Storm Brings Death to Three in New York

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 30.—One of the worst snowstorms in the last decade swept across New York State today, paralyzing traffic, causing many accidents and closing schools in many cities. Near Saratoga Spring a Delaware & Hudson engine was derailed killing two track walkers and the cold accompanying the storm brought death to a man at East Poestenkill.

Fitchburg Trolleys Tied Up by Storm

Fitchburg, Jan. 30—Trolley transportation in Fitchburg and vicinity was demoralized and motor buses operated with difficulty today as a result of a seven-inch snow fall accompanied by a strong wind which piled the snow in drifts. Hundreds of workers walked to work, while street railway and municipal forces were opening roads.

Dozens of automobiles became stalled in the snow. Trains from the north and west were two hours late.

RADIO USED IN QUEST OF MISSING PIANIST

in which the latter advised that no word or trace of the missing pianist had been received.

To a Boston Evening American reporter Mrs. Hubbard stoutly denied that the missing composer disappeared because of unrequited love for a well-known eNw York and Chicago man.

"I know something of her affairs with men, and I can say almost positively that there is no foundation for the report that she has fled into obscurity because of a disastrous love affair," said Mrs. Hubbard.

"oN such thing. It's preposterous."

The pianist's New York friends have resorted to radio as the latest means of attempting to locate her. A description of the missing artist was broadcast from a New York station while the police and private detectives redoubled their efforts.

Miss Leginska had no funds when she disappeared, according to her secretary. In the belief that she may have pawned the valuable fur coat she was wearing or some of the jewels she wore, police visited all New York pawnshops, but without unearthing any clue that would aid in solving the mystery of her disappearance.

Miss Lucile Oliver, the pianist's secretary, said Miss Leginska attempted suicide in Germany when she was studying music there.

"When she was seventeen or eighteen years of age she jumped into a river," said Miss Oliver.

"She suffered from amnesia at that time, as the next thing she remembered after being pulled out of the river that she was in London.

"She had begged meals at farmhouses and slept in barns in the interim, without recalling the details of her experiences."

a boxer and his manager. But I'll say this for Kearns, he is a manager par excellence—the greatest in the world. But with my marriage just a short time off, we are shaping things up for the great finale.

"I have said and repeat again, I am through with the boxing game. It's no business for a married man.

"Miss Taylor and I are going to settle down and be regular married people. I'll probably go into some kind of business and continue with the interests I now have. But as a boxer I am through."

May 20, the day set for the wedding, it was revealed, is Miss Taylor's birthday.

"Unless I can persuade her to marry sooner, Miss Taylor and I will be married May 20," the champion continued. "Estelle is a wonderful girl."

Jack and Estelle will be married May 20—the birthday of the bride-to-be.

This was revealed today when Miss Taylor, in an interview, declared that Dempsey, lion of the ring, was gentle as a lamb when in a courting mood. No cave-man stuff was employed by Jack in winning her hand, says Estelle. Far from it.

"I love him because he's a real man, with a big, kind heart," she said. "I learned to love him when I learned to rely on him, to transfer my troubles on his shoulders."

But there may be a slight dissension as to who bosses the household, after the wedding.

"There's going to be just one champion around the Dempsey house," whispered Estelle, "and that's me."

of the Boston & Albany Railroad and was baa-ing defiance at all the big choo-choos. But luckily for Eva, the good-natured choo-choos didn't get mad and sock dear little Eva a huge, harsh sock.

EVADES POLICE.

Patrolmen Timothy Callahan and Trant discovered the woolly pet and went in after it. But Eva slipped gleefully out into Cambridge street, where she took the trolley tracks to the confusion of many motormen, who clanged furiously but to no avail.

Then a crowd gathered and all traffic stopped. For the first time a crowd did some good—and Eva was cornered by the policemen who promptly pinched her.

There was a list of charges a yard long against Eva when the worried owner found her. But Captain Timothy Leahy opened his big heart and the station doors, releasing Eva to play one more with Mary.

G. O. P. and Democrats Agree to Remove Property Clause From Franchise Law

Providence, R. I., Jan. 30.—Although bitterly opposed on a majority of pending matters of legislation, Republican and Democratic members of the State Senate and House are apparently agreed that the present election laws must be revised.

Since the first Rhode Island assembly met to make laws governing the "Province Plantations," no freeman was permitted to vote on vital matters unless he was the possessor of unencumbered real estate or personal property to the amount of $134 in real estate—in the early days—or $200 in real estate or $300 in personal property, at the present time.

With the rapid industrial growth of the State the working class has suffered because of the unjust limitations of the election laws.

Now, reform is in sight.

Representative Congdon has introduced a bill eliminating the property qualification clause in the election law generally. Representative Congdon is an attorney and a Democrat from Pawtucket.

Another bill has been filed by Representative Ballou, Republican of Providence. The Ballou measure seeks to remove the property clause as pertaining to voters in the cities only.

The Ballou measure has some opposition.

Governor Aram Pothier informed the Boston Evening American that he is in accord with any legislation designed to remove for all time, the limitations upon the right of the people to exercise their power of franchise.

might put out of kelter the talance set up by the Washington treaty."

Mr. Curtis means that a union of Russia, China and Japan might upset the results of that silly Washington conference, in which the United States agreed with England, France and Japan to keep things balanced in the Pacific Ocean.

BUT THE POSSIBILITY of upsetting the very shaky Pacific balance isn't the important thing.

The serious possibility becomes clear, when you contemplate the pleasant time that the Japanese might have, if they came here through the air leading a thousand Russian, Chinese and Japanese flying ships, to see what they could do to a few dozens of American cities.

THAT WOULD BE an interesting adventure for the Asiatics and Russians. Many of them would enjoy "teaching a lesson to the arrogant American dollar kings."

But at first it wouldn't be a pleasant adventure for the United States. And that is the very thing that threatens the United States at this moment.

Every government official, from the President down, bears a heavy responsibility, and later on may live through an unpleasant conference if he fails to give this country adequate preparation for defence. The President, fortunately for the country, is deeply interested. But it's time to begin buying and building fighting airships.

OUR NATION says to Japan: "You must keep your people out of here"; and to Russia, "We despise you and your government, and assume the right to tell you what government you shall have." A nation talking in such fashion should be able to make good its words.

A NATION that dictates to other nations ought not to sit as this nation does, like a fat grocer, swollen with his own profits, sunning himself in his doorway, with no weapon for defence, at the mercy of the first international gunman that may come along.

Nome Begs Serum by Airplane; Dog Teams Too Slow

EPIDEMIC IS MORE SERIOUS

Appeals to Washington to Save Children Threatened by Diphtheria's Sweep

Washington, Jan. 30.—Authorization for Roy S. Darling, special agent of the Department of Justice, to make an airplane flight with diphtheria antitoxin from Fairbanks to Nome has been forwarded to Alaska.

Nome, Alaska, Jan. 30 (A.P.).—The diphtheria epidemic has taken a serious turn.

The citizens, through the Nome correspondent of the Associated Press, addressed this appeal that official Washington hasten anti-toxin serum by airplane from Fairbanks, rather than force them to wait for dog team delivery:

"Help immediately! Help by airplane with anti-toxin serum, is the appeal of Nome, not for the sourdoughs, but especially for the children, the young Americans of tomorrow.

"We do not want to ask Soviet Russia to send an icebreaker with anti-toxin, nor do we ask that the Shenandoah or the Los Angeles be dispatched, but please get Uncle Sam to send an airplane from Fairbanks with two red-blooded men who have volunteered to fly to Nome in four hours' time in order to bring relief.

MORE NEW CASES.

"There is a shipment of anti-toxin from Juneau due in Nenana February 3, which if sent by airplane will beat the dogteam by several days to Nome, which may save the lives of many.

"More new cases have been reported. Dr. Welch states that all four and five-year-old anti-toxin has been used up and only one good dose of six-year-old anti-toxin is left.

"There have been about 75,000 units of old anti-toxin used, which has been responsible for holding epidemic in check to date, but now that it is used up and more cases are appearing, the situation becomes serious, due to the fact that if we must wait for dog team to arrive, we cannot expect relief much before February 13."

1,110,000 Units Being Sent From Seattle

Seattle, Jan. 30 (AP).—While the fastest dog teams of northern Alaska were racing in relays today over the frozen tundra along the Yukon River with a package of 300,000 units of anti-toxin to relieve diphtheria epidemic in Nome, final arrangements were made to ship an additional 1,110,000 units from Seattle on the steamship Alemada tomorrow.

The shipment will go by mail to Seward, be transferred to the Alaska railroad, and, at Nenana, be given to a dog team driver. Another relay race then will be run to Nome.

The United States health service furnished 1,000,000 units of anti-toxin while the territorial bureau of education here supplied the other 110,000 units. Extensive precautions have been taken to protect the serum from the cold and to guard against breakage.

The serum was put in thousands of small glass vials which were packed in small, lined cases. The cases were placed in excelsior and deposited in larger boxes with waterproof coverings.

Dog Team Races to Relief of Nome

Anchorage, Alaska, Jan. 30.—(I.N.S.).—With strained muscles and harness taut, the strongest, fleetest dogs in Alaska today sped northward in an effort to bring life-giving anti-toxin into diphtheria-stricken Nome.

Over snow and ice-covered trails in the bitter cold of the Arctic raced Dan Green, the third champion dog racer of the north, relaying serum to the disease-ravaged city. In the light sled which Green's dogs are pulling rested a twenty pound package of 1,000,000 anti-toxin units.

MOTORMAN IN TROLLEY CRASH IS SOUGHT

Two actresses, a policeman and two motormen were injured when a Mattapan street car jumped a switch and crashed into a one-man car at Seaver street and Humboldt avenue, Roxbury.

The actresses and policeman were passengers on the Mattapan car.

The motor man in charge of the Mattapan car, Michael Healey, of No. 14 Langdon street, Roxbury, although cut and bruised about the face, disappeared immediately after the crash and could not be found by police or the inspectors of the railway company.

Recently, Healey was in charge of a car that figured in another accident and at that time he was taken to the police station for questioning.

Theda Bernard and Metra Richards, actresses, appearing in a Dorchester theatre and living at the Hotel Hollis, were in the Mattapan car. They suffered from shock but were later able to go to their hotel.

Samuel Wark, motorman of the one-man car which was standing on Humboldt avenue when the Mattapan car crashed into it, was thrown against the end of the car. His face was cut and bruised and he has a possible fracture of the right forearm.

Patrolman Edward F. Kelley, attached to Station No. 19, at Mattapan, suffered contusions and abrasions of the left leg.

BLOW SPRINGFIELD SAFE AND GET $3,500

Springfield, Jan. 30.—While officials and salesmen of the Springfield Sash & Glass Company were at a banquet, cracksmen blew off the doors of a safe in the office of the company at No. 28 Belle avenue, and fled with $3,500 in cash and certified checks. The burglars left on a desk $600 worth of Liberty bonds which had been removed from an inner compartment of the safe.

CROWDS HOOT AT FUNERAL FOR DOG

While hoodlums guffawed and throngs of the curious looked on with keen interest, two limousines rolled up to a modest dwelling in the South End, and an undertaker bearing a satin coffin, led to the cars a band of mourners.

"Beauty," the thirteen-year-old Portugese poodle, belonging to Mrs. Carrie Duck, of No. 73 Middlesex street, was being conveyed to a dog-vault in Pine Ridge Cemetery, with fitting ceremony.

Two women, Mrs. Duck and her mother, Mrs. Bessie Warhurst, of Fall River, were the chief mourners, followed by a handful of neighbors who dared the ridicule of their less sympathetic friends to follow the remains to the cemetery.

Horns blew and the crowds surged around the funeral cortege as it moved off.

"Wait 'till I get my book," shouted a hoodlum, "and I'll come along with you!"

Mrs. Duck buried another dog with similar rites last year.

CLAIMS EXCLUSIVE RIGHT TO LILLIAN GISH FILMS

New York, Jan. 30.—Charles H. Duell, former president of Inspiration Pictures, Inc., filed a summons and complaint in Federal Court today seeking to enjoin Lillian Gish, motion picture actress, from making pictures for anyone but himself. Duell said he had obtained exclusive use of Miss Gish's services under a contract she had made with Inspiration Pictures.

Counsel for the actress said Duell had "tried to tie Miss Gish up for life" and that she would show in court that she had been "outrageously treated" by him. He is a lawyer.

Ship Runs Ashore In Big Gale; Lifeguards Battle to Rescue Crew

Southeast Harbor, Me., Jan. 30.—The three-masted schooner Frances Parsons, of Parrsboro, N. S., was driven ashore here today in a terrific northeast blizzard and lies in a dangerous position on King's Point near the United States naval radio station.

Coast guardsmen from the Cranberry Isle station are standing by in their power boat to take the crew off in case the vessel begins to break up before a coast guard cutter can reach her.

The gale has abated and shifted to the southwest and if the cutter arrives before nightfall it is believed the schooner can be saved.

The Parsons has been in the harbor here the last three days, waiting favorable weather to proceed to her home port. She is light.

Five Battle for Lives in Ice-Coated Rigging

Seabright, N. J., Jan. 30.—Five men who refused to abandon the four-masted schooner Commack, which went aground on a reef one-half mile off-shore were in the mast heads early today, with the craft fast breaking up beneath them.

A second attempt was to be made by coast guards to brave the forty-five mile an hour gale and the heavy seas and reach the men.

ITALIAN COMPOSER TO HEAR OWN OPERA SUNG

An event of unusual interest will be the appearance of Italo Montemezzi, Italian composer, as guest of the Chicago Opera Company at the performance Thursday night of his opera, "The Love of Three Kings." This opera, which the Chicago company first presented here two years ago, has been hailed by critics as the greatest Italian opera since Verdi, and as one of the greatest of all music-dramas.

The management of the Opera company hopes to have Mr. Koussevitsky of the Boston Symphony Orchestra present at the same performance. Mr. Montemezzi's appearance, however, is definite. Mary Garden will head a notable cast.

FORRAI SINGS HARD ROLE IN 'TANNHAUSER'

Chicago Opera Star Pleases Large Audience in Wagner Program

By MOSES SMITH.

Wagner's "Tannhauser," the only German opera on the program of the Chicago Opera Company for its season in Boston, was presented at the Opera House last night. Accordingly the event took on an unusual importance, and a crowded house, with society out in full force, witnessed the performance.

Olga Forrai, new to Boston audiences, made her only scheduled appearance, in the role of Elizabeth. Her voice is a clear bell-like soprano which is pleasing. Elizabeth has a difficult role in the opera, but Mme. Forrai was equal to her task. Joseph Scwharz, who has not been heard in Boston for several seasons, was impressive as Wolfram. He sang with resonance and perfect intonation. The quality of his voice is of unusual purity.

Tannhauser was sung by Forrest Lamont, who seems to be the all-round man of the company. He is equally well at home in Italian, French and German operas.

There was a fine setting of the Venusberg Ballet scene, and the lighting effects were beautiful. A spirited ballet strengthened the scene.

The opera was conducted by Henry G. Weber, only twenty-three years old. It was remarkable to see this youth conducting a score which tries men much older and more experienced. So far as this writer knows, Mr. Weber is the youngest conductor of grand opera.

Tonight's opera is "Carmen," with Mary Garden, Edith Mason, Fernand Anseau, and Georges Bakianoff.

Vivid Costumes Dazzle Eyes of Spectators in Every Section of Big Music Auditorium

By Betty Alden

VERILY the pageant of the opera proceeds in glorious fashion. With fresh enthusiasms and fine fervor the exclusive set turned out last evening to fill to overflowing every vantage point in boxes and stalls.

THERE WAS a glittering vista everywhere one turned. And many new faces not before chronicled in these columns. Mrs. Francis Bacon Lothrop and Mr. Lothrop were there, Mrs. Lothrop enveloped in a luxurious green velvet and mink wrap over her pale rose-pink crepe gown.

MRS. JOHN REED POST and her lovely daughter, Mary, were in the orchestra and later I saw them in the promenade. Mrs. Post's costume of black with wrap of black velvet and fur, and jet and diamond ornaments set off her tall and stately height in the glittering assemblage.

ELIZABETH STACKPOLE, the radiant daughter of the J. Lewis Stackpoles, grows in verve and attractiveness with each passing day, so it seems. She dresses in the brighter colors always for the evening—her frock for the opera a vivid cerise cut velvet with cloak of slate gray velvet and fox.

YOUNG MRS. HOWLAND SEABURY and Mr. Seabury were among the first to arrive. Mrs. Seabury swathed in a peacock blue velvet wrap over her gown of black. She looked every bit the charming Rosamond Johnson that was, who may be remembered as one of the loveliest brides that ever trod the broad aisle of stately Emmanuel Church.

THERE WAS A GAY influx of the younger feminine element—buds and other older girls—who met and chatted in the crush during the promenade at the end of the second act.

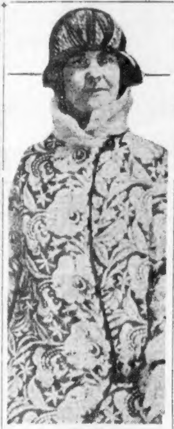
I SAW MARTHA BIGELOW, Juliet Greene, Olga and Ellen Frothingham, Evelyn Windeler, Margery Richardson, Nancy Wentworth, Susanne Apsey, Edith Parker, Helen Scott, Alice Lowell and Olivia Howard among others.

OLIVIA HOWARD, in a Nile green satin with iridescent beads, wore as a wrap a heavily embroidered Chinese mandarin coat of black with every color of the rainbow worked into its splashing figures. She and her fiance, Robert Raymond, were in the box which her aunt, Mrs. Whitwell, shares with Mr. and Mrs. Horace Binney.

ALICE LOWELL, daughter of the Frederick Lowells of Concord, and now abroad, I believe, wore a rose velvet wrap and gown of shimmering pastel tints; Ellen Frothingham's opera wrap was deep blue velvet and her sister, Olga, was in black, with one of those deeply fringed silken shawls that the opera season has brought back into high feminine favor.

SPEAKING OF SHAWLS, there was none more striking in the whole gay auditorium than the rare affair Mrs. Harris Livermore draped about her slender shoulders. Once again Mrs. Livermore has charmed all observers with her picturesque attire. Last evening she was truly the Spanish lady of high degree, in black taffeta, a high comb in her raven hair, and the gorgeously tinted shawl in carelessly clever drapery.

BUT TO RETURN to the young girls—Helen Scott's gown was black satin and her wrap chinchilla. Evelyn Windeler's wrap embroidered black satin and her gown a French affair of beaded crepe, and Suzanne Apsey's gown pale rose and her opera cloak gray velvet with pastel flowers in painted design.



MRS. B. H. BRISTOW DRAPER
She and Mr. Draper are sponsors for the Boston season of grand opera now having such a brilliant run at the Opera House. The Drapers belong to the well-known Hopedale family of that name.

MARGERY RICHARDSON, lovely daughter of the handsome Mrs. F. L. W. Richardson, wrapped about her taffeta frock a gay affair of rich petunia velvet. Margery came out two years ago, and immediately stepped into a leading place in the bud set, as well she might, if beauty and charm are the open sesame to that coveted position.

MRS. WILLIAM H. COOLIDGE and Mr. Coolidge were a much observed couple in the stately older coterie which chatted and promenaded and visited about from box to box.

MRS. COOLIDGE, last evening, was all in gray, her luxurious cut velvet wrap when doffed revealing a gown of beaten silver sequins on black, a creation vastly becoming.

MRS. FRANCIS SEARS and Mr. Sears, with much enthusiasm for the opera, are of the "regulars" in evidence each evening. Mrs. Sears wore ruby velvet, one of the chic affairs of which there are many in her smart wardrobe, and her wrap was a velvet of soft golden yellow with bandings of matching fox fur.

Distinguished Groups Adorn Boxes on Fourth Night of Chicago Opera Co.'s Stay

MRS. ALVAN FULLER, the First Lady of the Commonwealth, set off her stately height with a frock of iridescent metal tints beneath a wrap of purple in that pansy tone so extremely becoming, but so difficult to name.

MRS. FULLER is one of the handsomest matrons to grace the Opera season.

ANOTHER MATRON with beautifully coiffed hair and stunning frock was Mrs. William Dana Orcutt, whom I glimpsed in the promenade. She was in metal brocade, cleverly draped, with pearls for ornaments and her wrap was a gorgeous gold cloth shot through with black, with cloth of gold collar.

LOUISE FESSENDEN, one of the Sewall Fessenden girls, set off her blonde self in black net and a wrap of softest gray, a velvet with deeply furred collar and cuffs.

MARGARET WINSLOW, of Junior League fame, was one of a box party at the left of the horseshoe, wearing a shimmering frock of green and silver, and a batik scarf of rainbow tints.

MARY LOUISE BUTTERFIELD, that pretty girl of last Winter's set, and her mother were of a box party. Mary's frock was petunia crepe, a deep tint to match her luscious coloring, and her wrap bright blue with ermine. Mary Louise is a beauty, really, and much remarked even in a Winter that boasted any number of handsome girls.

MR. AND MRS. DANIEL DE MENOCAL were in a box at the left. Mrs. De Menocal's opera cloak was golden brown caracul and fox, and her gown a striped effect of sage green and dull gold.

MRS. JOHN CHIPMAN GRAY, in a royal blue velvet wrap when she arrived, later was to be seen in her box in a rich gown of gold lace over rose, and about her shoulders a white fox scarf.

BETTY BEAL and her mother, Mrs. Boylston Beal, each flaunted a gorgeous embroidered shawl as a costume accessory. Betty's was white splashed over with roses, and her gown jade velvet with steel beads. Mrs. [illegible] shawl was Chinese red, and her gown black net with rows of glittering sequins at hem and waistline.

MRS. BEAL AND BETTY are always smartly arrayed, their gowns of a French air set them quite apart even in such a pageant as the Opera.

MR. AND MRS. WALLACE GOODRICH had Mrs. George Stoddard in their box. I saw them early in the evening, just as the company that filled the Opera House was settling down for the musical feast to come, and yet again, in the crush of departure. Mrs. Goodrich's wrap was wine red with silver fox and Mrs. Stoddard's gray and dark metal tones.

MARY MINTER SUES MOTHER FOR MILLIONS

Los Angeles, Jan. 30.—Mary Miles Minter's millions, money she says she earned during a stage and screen career that began when she was six years old, today formed a golden gulf across which the actress and her mother faced each other as opponents in a lawsuit.

In an action filed in Superior Court for an accounting of funds which she alleges her mother received for her as her guardian, Miss Minter, giving her name as Juliette Shelby, "also known as Juliette Reilly," stated that her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, "also known as Pearl Miles Reilly," repeatedly had refused to make any accounting.

The sums received by Mrs. Shelby from time to time included, according to the complaint, $700,000 earned by Miss Minter under a contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation during the years 1920-1923. Her total earnings she was unable to estimate accurately, she said, but was confident the sum ran into seven figures.

Burned By Tea

VICTIM AND MOTHER.

At top, Alfred Smart, who was seriously scalded when his mother, Mrs Adelise Smart (below), upset a kettle of hot tea on the two-year-old boy and his five-year-old sister, Bertha. Both little victims will recover.

Bertha Smart, five, and her two-year-old baby brother Alfred narrowly escaped being scalded to death under a kettle of hot tea in their home at No. 142 Marginal street, East Boston.

While carrying the kettle across the room, Mrs. Adelise Smart slipped and the boiling contents spilled over the two children playing on the floor. Both were burned about the face, neck and upper body and treated at the East Boston Relief Hospital.

LIVESTOCK BURNED IN NORTH BROOKFIELD FIRE

North Brookfield, Jan. 30.—Livestock, stored meat, automobiles and farm implements valued at more than $25,000 were destroyed when a fire of undetermined origin swept the three-story barn of Meyer Grace here. Firemen, handicapped by the storm, were unable to save the structure, but did excellent work in keeping the flames, which were fanned by a strong wind, from attacking the Grace Home and other buildings nearby.

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 30.—During the season's worst blizzard, five families, comprising twenty persons, were driven into the snow today when fire in Andrew's restaurant did $5,000 damage. The alarm was given by Mrs. Jeannette Pichette, telephone operator, who reported the lights were flashing on her board from the building, although the restaurant was closed.

TO SING FOR DISABLED VETS

MISS CYRENA VAN GORDON

MISS HELEN FREUND

MISS LUCY WESTEN

Chicago Opera Company principals who entertained World War veterans at the West Roxbury Veterans' Hospital with opera arias and other songs.

Mme. Olga Forrai, soprano, who scored a success last night in Tannhauser at the Boston Opera House, will sing several selections in connection with the regular Boston American program at Station WNAC, the Shepard Stores next Tuesday evening.

Another leading member of the Chicago Opera Company, Henry Weber, conductor, will accompany Mme. Forrai on the piano. Although both are in their early twenties, they have already carved places for themselves in the opera world.

Three songbirds of the company today made life merrier for wounded veterans of the World War at the West Roxbury Veterans' Hospital, in a program arranged by the American at the request of Captain Black of the Veterans' Bureau.

Miss Cyrena Van Gordon, contralto, one of the principals of the opera company, and Miss Helen Freund and Miss Lucy Westen, two of the younger members, made a big hit with the vets. They sang arias from several of the operas and many other songs.

Miss Freund, who is known as "the baby of the company," is a protege of Mary Garden and is being trained by her for success on the opera stage. Both she and Miss Westen are sopranos.

MANY SORROW AT BIER OF CURLEY GIRL

Mayor's Family to Announce Plans for Daughter's Funeral Late Today

The grief-stricken home of Mayor and Mrs. James M. Curley on Jamaicaway, is today thronged with friends mourning at the bier of Dorothea, the fourteen-year-old daughter of the Mayor, who succumbed to an attack of lobar pneumonia.

The silent lines that pass in and out of the darkened home are composed of men, women and children drawn from all walks of life.

The City's captains of finance and industry drive to the home in glistening limousines, in an effort to assuage the grief of the City Chief executive and his wife.

They rub shoulders with schoolchildren from humble homes. Standing in line are laborers and day mechanics who have shared in the triumphs, the disappointments and the sorrows of "Jim" Curley for years.

Every child attending the Sacred Heart Academy where Dorothea Curley was a pupil, has already been to the Curley home. So, too, have the nuns in charge of the school, for the dead girl was a favorite with students and teachers alike.

The details of the funeral services, which will be held tomorrow morning in the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, will be announced late today. The Mayor, after the strain of the past week, has found it difficult to attend to the details of naming the pall bearers and performing the other tasks in connection with the obsequies.

The church seats only 600 persons, making it necessary to allot seats for the relatives and close friends of the family.

Interment will be made in the family plot in Old Calvary Cemetery, West Roxbury.

CHEAPER LIGHT PLEA TO END MONDAY

Inquiry of Boston Evening American Shows an Edison Salary Is $50,000

Henry F. Hurlburt, Jr., counsel for the Boston Evening American, at the hearing of its petition before the Public Utilities Commission for a reduction in the rates of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, will complete the presentation of his case Monday, he announced today.

Attorney Hurlburt requested the commission to divorce the Boston Evening American's petition from other similar petitions before it and give a separate decision on the evidence presented.

ONE $50,000 SALARY.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph P. Lyons told the commission he did not know, because of Mayor Curley's absence due to the death of his daughter, what position the city of Boston would take on its petition in relation to the request of Mr. Hurlburt.

The introduction of a salary schedule of officers and department heads of the company disclosed that there had been a steady increase in salaries since 1922.

One officer receives $50,000 or more, one between $20,000 and $25,000, three employes between $15,000 and $20,000, thirteen between $10,000 and $15,000 and thirty-six between $5,000 and $10,000.

VALUES NOT ADVERTISED.

The "three per cent. of cost" which the light company figures for lost bulbs is based upon the vaguest of information, Attorney Hurlburt brought out in his examination of J. W. Cowles, superintendent of installation for the company.

The light company does not advertise the value of the bulbs and many of them are thrown away by housewives it was disclosed.

In many instances the bulbs "loaned" by the company can be purchased at a lower price outside and become the permanent property of the consumer.

SAMUEL SILVERMAN NOT IN FUR COAT CASE

Officer George H. McCaffrey of the district attorney's office was in error in assuming that Samuel Silverman, assistant corporation counsel of the city of Boston, appeared before Judge Sheehan in the Court of Small Claims yesterday to represent Morris Beaser in a controversy over a fur coat purchased by Lydia E. Minter at the store of Beaser on the installment plan.

Mr. Silverman says that he was at the office of the corporation counsel attending to his duties at the time the case was being heard and that he had no connection in any manner with it, nor is he counsel for any private interests since receiving his appointment to the law department of the city of Boston.

TEN-CENT FARE IS SUCCESS IN SEATTLE

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 30.—Seattle's municipal street railway was operated at a profit of nearly $10,000 in December, Superintendent D. W. Henderson announced in his monthly report. Revenue receipts for December were $552,505, against $524,574 in December, 1923. The net profit in December was $9,685.

The road operates under a single 10-cent fare, three rides for a quarter. In four months of 1923, while operating under a five-cent fare, the city lost $3,000 a day on the line.

CHAPTER VII.

THE world's champion heavyweights of the past twenty years have included a wide variety of human beings.

But Jack Dempsey is the first "prizefighting sheik" in the world's history. Girls and women of all classes "fall for him" as they do for the Prince of Wales and Rudolph Valentino. Just why is partly a mystery, and part no mystery at all. He is young, handsome—since he got his nose fixed. He is graceful, boyish, good-natured. It may be partly that. It may be the other thing—the appeal of tremendous physical strength.

I've tried to get him to talk about it directly—and he won't. Because another of his qualities happens to be modesty.

But he has told me the truth about his twenty-seven "engagements," and here, faithfully set down just as he told it, is the truth about his reported engagement to Peggy Hopkins Joyce:

"The first time I ever saw Peggy Joyce was in a night club in Paris called the Grizzly, patterned after the swell places on Broadway, with an American jazz orchestra, but not so crowded.

"I had gone there with the president of the French Sport club and some American newspaper men for supper after the theatre. There were five of us stag at a table. We had no Janes along, for a captain of the detective force had promised to take us later to a place over behind the markets where we might run into some real Apaches and gunmen and underworld stuff that was not faked.

INTERESTED, OF COURSE.

"At a table in the Grizzly about ten feet across from us were two women who looked like they had robbed a jewelry store, and a couple of men who looked like the grand dukes in the movies, except that they had no beards.

"One of the girls was Peggy Joyce, and one of the men was Letellier, who owns one of the biggest newspapers, and is said to be the best dressed man in Paris. That's what they told me. I wouldn't have recognized either one.

"But I was interested to look at Peggy. I wanted to see what she had, if you get what I mean. I wanted to see if I could figure out how she had done it. Talk about my 'rise,' if you want to call it that—it's nothing to what she's done. That girl at sixteen was the barber's daughter in a little one-horse town outside Norfolk. She had nothing to go on, no start in life, no jumping-off place, except what was in her. Her name was Maggie Upton, and believe me, she's the gal who put the 'up' in Upton. How does a girl with a start like that get millionaire husbands and diamonds and fur coats and fame and all the rest of it, while others just as pretty and with a better start, and with not a bit more conscience end up with a gas stove and a hall-room and a dose of bichloride. If she had caught one millionaire it might be luck. Any pretty girl might do it once. But she's had a whole string of 'em. She traps 'em like mink.

"And when I got this first good chance to look at her I asked myself where was the bait. She was pretty, all right, but she looked to me exactly like a dozen other girls—maybe a hundred other girls—I had seen in the Ziegfeld 'Follies' and such places. Of course, her diamonds and her clothes and her pearls helped her. Even so, I couldn't get it, looking across the room.

"But I found out afterward I was wrong. She's got something different that's all her own, and you can't be close to her once without finding it out, though you may not be able to say exactly what it was.

"How I came to meet her and see her closer up was this: The Frenchman who was with us knew Letellier and I guess Peggy Joyce, too. Everybody was getting sort of friendly and the band was playing American jazz tunes, and between two of them he got up and made a speech, part in French and part in English. He said here were two famous Americans, the most beautiful girl and the huskiest man, or something like that, and here was a band playing American music, and they ought to dance together an American dance.

"Peggy Joyce whispered to Letellier and everybody waited to see what was going to happen, and somebody poked me and said 'Get up, Jack,' and I stood up, and she smiled and got up, too, and the next thing I knew we were dancing.

ON WITH THE DANCE.

"I like dancing. I like music. That's why I carry a Victrola around everywhere I go. A fellow who has to shadow-box and skip rope as much as I do has got to be fairly quick on his feet, and while I don't know very many fancy steps I could keep off her toes all right, and the music was swell and we got along fine.

"Only I didn't know what to say to her, and she didn't say anything, and I thought I ought to say something, and all I could think of was, 'Well, it's a great life.' And then I was sorry I said it, for it certainly wasn't very bright. But she smiled, and in a little while we were talking as friendly as you please. And while we were dancing she said, like a little girl would say it, 'I wonder if you would let me feel the muscle of your arm?' And she ran her hand over my shoulder and coat sleeve—no flirty stuff, it was just like Jack Kearns might do to see how the training was coming along—and she said, 'Nobody could tell it; you must have a good tailor.' That's about all there was to our first meeting. But she took me over to the table afterward and I talked a little with Letellier and he invited me to dinner for two nights later at his house.

"What? Yes, sure I'm going to tell you about Peggy Joyce. This was last Summer, you understand, after she had got her divorce from this fellow Joyce, her third or fourth multi-millionaire husband. They say he spent a million dollars on her in less than a year, and that in her divorce settlement, if I remember right, she got $80,000 cash, a bunch of jewelry worth a cold million, and a $75,000 fur coat.

"Well, the night I went to dinner at Letellier's; it was a big party, and if she didn't have on the whole million dollars' worth, she had most of it. Diamond bracelets, whole rings of them up and down her arms, diamonds all over her fingers, and diamonds on her feet—big buckles on the narrowest pointed silver slippers you ever saw. But it looked all right. She could carry it and get away with it. Besides, it was that sort of party. A lot of other women had almost as many.

"To tell you the truth, it was the swellest party I've ever been at—better even than the one Lord Lonsdale gave in London. All the women were beautiful, and there must have been about twenty of them. Don't ask their names, for I can't remember French names, and they were mostly French, Italian or something. There was a Princess this, and a Duchess that and a couple of Countesses, and there were opera singers and actresses and dancers.

"I noticed when I went in and soon spied Peggy Joyce for she was about the only woman there I knew, that when a man would go up to speak to her he wouldn't shake hands. Either he bowed to her or she held out her hand high to him and he took it on the back of his his hand and bent over and kissed it. The other women were doing the same way.

"I had never kissed anybody's hand and didn't quite know how, and I began to feel nervous and embarrassed. I hoped she wouldn't put her hand out. When I was introduced to several of the others I had never seen before, they just stood and I bowed the best I could and it was all right. But when I got to Peggy Joyce she put out her hand too high for me to shake without being a boob, and I couldn't just bow, and I had to kiss it or run, so I kissed it. I didn't exactly kiss it either. I was ashamed to. I just sort of touched it with my face and pretended to kiss it.

PAST AND PRESENT.

"Afterwards we got to talking just as plain and sensible as could be and I laughed and told her about it, and she told me that I had done it exactly right. But if I did, it was an accident. She told me in Europe you must never shake hands with a woman unless it's a pal like a man would be or somebody you're in business with or something like that. You must always either bow or kiss the hand. Some comedy, eh? Jack Dempsey being taught etiquette by Peggy Joyce. I liked her fine, and I'll tell the world I think she's good.

"A couple of days later I went to ride with Peggy Joyce in the park—not in a car, but in one of those open four-wheel things like you still sometimes see on Fifth avenue, only this one had two horses and two men in high hats sitting up on the front seat.

"That was fine, but the next morning Jack Kearns, who was stopping in the same set of rooms with me at the Claridge, woke me up with a newspaper—I think it was the Paris New York Herald, and said:

"'This is a h—l of a come-off. Do you know anything about this? And I looked and there was a piece on the front page about Peggy Joyce and me—about our riding and dancing and dining together in Paris and it said we were reported or rumored or something, to be engaged!

"And there were a dozen newspaper reporters and correspondents either telephoning or waiting downstairs to see me.

"One of them told me it had been cabled to New York and printed that morning all over the United States, and wanted to know if it was really true. I said, 'Of course, it isn't.' And he said, 'Well, part of it's true, isn't it?' And I said, 'How can part of engaged be true? You're either engaged, or you're not.' He said, 'No, but it's true that you like Miss Joyce, and that you've been dancing and riding with her, and so on.'

MUSH, OH NO!

"But that afternoon or the next morning there was a second story, and it didn't say we were NOT engaged. It just said we denied the engagement, and repeated over again about the dancing, and our playing around together—though there hadn't really been any more of that than exactly what I told you—and ended by hinting that the ngegement might be true.

"Well, Peggy Joyce has got sense. She was good and sore when I next saw her, but not sore at me. She said, 'Look here, Jack, publicity is all well enough, but this sort of publicity can't do either you or me any good. I wish you'd do me a favor. Plain denials don't do any good. People don't know whether they are true or not. I wish you'd figure out some way to put a crimp in this story—particularly back in the United States, where I understand it's been spread everywhere.'

"I said, 'Sure, I'll do my best. I'll try to figure out a way.'

"When you're on shipboard you've got plenty of time to think and I figured out a way that was a scream while Jack and I were coming back on the Aquitania.

"One of the first men I saw on the pier after we came down the gang plank was Harry Newman. He caught me aside and said, 'Hey, Jack, I hear you're engaged?' I said, 'Sure, I'm engaged. It's true.' He said, 'What? Peggy Joyce.' I said, 'No, her name is Edith Rockwell. Meet me at the Ansonia in an hour and I'll give you the whole story.'"

In the next chapter, Jack Dempsey tells the entire truth, never before published, about the real facts behind the Edith Rockwell story, and about little Mary Belknap, who was, he says, "The first girl I ever loved."

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS
Take Jad Salts If Your Back Hurts, or Bladder Is Troubling You
No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness often come from sluggish kidneys.
The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.
This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.
Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

PLAY AND BEAT OLD AGE, SAYS JIM CORBETT

Act Like a Kid for an Hour Each Day, He Tells Boston City Club Diners

Jim Corbett cries at the movies. He also laughs.

Now you have the secret, from the lips of "Gentleman Jim" himself, of why in his fifty-ninth year, he has the appearance and the vigor of a mere "kid" of thirty-two.

Of course that isn't all the secret, but in the telling of his surrender to his emotions, the former world's champion heavyweight ringster of the days when a fight was a real quarrel, summed up his main theory of his youth. He allows himself to be human.

It was James J. Corbett, successful youth of affairs and juvenile at Keith's Theatre this week, who sat at the dinner table last night in the Boston City Club as principal guest at the final Thursday night dinner in a series that have been held without a break for well over a decade.

TELLS SECRETS.

But it was the Jim Corbett of the struggling days, of the fanfest, of the story tellers' corner, of the Friars' Club and of the idle hour in the dressing room back stage that spread out the secret to the 500 men in his City Club audience.

"I will be fifty-nine years old next September," said the veteran youth. "I am the same weight now that I was thirty-three years ago next September when I licked John L. Sullivan.

"I drink three quarts of water a day—no ice water. I eat meat but no beef; not at fifty-nine.

"In a day I eat only one good meal. Mornings I have a little fruit, toast, perhaps a cereal. At six o'clock, some seven hours following breakfast, I have a hearty meal. Then after the show I take a plate of prunes or a glass of milk or something like that.

"I smoke five cigars a day because I have to watch my smoking. I like to smoke and would prefer smoking twenty.

BANS WHITE BREAD.

"I never eat white bread unless I am out like tonight and no gluten is available. I chew my food well and every year have my teeth examined all over. In this way if anything starts, it can be caught before it takes a firm hold.

"Many men, when they reach forty-five, give up and cease to be active. On Sunday afternoons, he sits around with his slippers on, reads the papers, eats himself logy and gets no exercise.

"I take my dog and go out for a walk—two or three hours, sometimes gone all afternoon. Watch a man who is walking briskly on Sunday afternoon. Watch him and notice how well he looks.

"Then watch the man who looks old for his age. He ambles and slouches along, gazing at the buildings—no pep, no youth, no life.

"A lot of men who become successful, fill themselves up with importance and dignity and build a wall around themselves. But why?

PLAY LIKE A KID.

"Why can't a man leave his importance and dignity in the office and get out into a gym and play handball and fool around and act like a kid for an hour or two. I do—and that's why they say I'm still a kid.

"Some men—not all of them—say they play golf for exercise. Golfing is good exercise. But the man I can't understand is the intelligent business man that goes out to the golf links with a bag of clubs in one hand and a bottle of booze in the other. They only go out to work up a thirst. And he says he goes out for his health.

"Be charitable. I don't mean give away all your money. But be charitable in little things. Be contented and happy and you'll be young. But you can't go out and play a dirty trick on somebody and expect to be happy.

"You must not worry. I know it's easy to say that. But I claim it is all mental. When I went into the ring, the underdog, to face Sullivan, I had everything in the world to worry about. But I had trained my will power for a year and would not let myself worry.

EVER BE HUMAN.

"And for the love of somebody—have a sense of humor. It's what keeps a fellow young. Just be human. When I go to the movies—I've been in them and know just how they're made—I don't say to myself, 'Oh, I know this is all acting.'

"No sir. If the picture is a little touching, I get the old lump in my throat and the little drops on my cheeks. And when it is funny, I roar like any kid. I've trained myself to be human.

"Try it and keep young."

MELT SNOW TO GET WATER TO DRINK

After melting snow to get drinking water for five days, residents of Dunn road, Revere and vicinity, are getting city water again. A break in a two-inch main in Dunn road, cause of the trouble, has been temporarily repaired.

Citizens are angry at Revere officials for their alleged slowness in repairing the damage. The officials in reply say most of the trouble is caused by the complainants themselves in allowing their meters to freeze.

Charles Wilder of No. 127 Dunn road said:

"I was without water for five days. My family had to melt snow to get drinking water and with yhich to make tea and coffee. I complained to the mayor and another city official."

NEW SET IS CONSISTENT RECEIVER

By M. A. SIMMONS, Technical Radio Editor

On Tuesday night, Jan. 27, the new American set was taken to a location about five miles from WEEI. At ten o'clock we started to tune in various stations. Checking from our log reading of Jan. 24th the dials were then set to the readings for different stations. Many stations not logged previously were secured and their readings marked down. This brought the total logging up to 112 stations to date. Nearly all of these stations were received on loud speaker and many of them were loud enough to operate the speaker on three tubes.

Tuesday's logging showed the following stations: WBZ, WCX, WIP, WLW, CNRT, WHN, WEEI, WNAC, WPG, WTAS, WGBS, KDKA, WGR, WMBF, WTAM, WEBH, WGY, WJZ, WRC, WEAF, WNYC, KYW, WHB, WCAE, WFBA, WAHG, WDBR WBBR. This is not a long list, but as some of the stations had programs too interesting to miss, we did not go after a long list. All stations, however, were on loud speaker.

Many have come in the office to ask about the parts to be specified in the new set. For the new one there will probably be only one make of each part specified, as we have tested different parts and found the best one suited for each purpose. If you want your receiver to duplicate our results, stick to the specified parts. Don't Accept Substitutes.

Another thing for you to think about, is the saving of your copies of the paper. On our last set no back copies were obtainable, and all reprints are gone. Don't get caught on this one. No promise can be made now as to reprints being given out.

Croup Relieved Without Dosing

Too much dosing is harmful to a child's delicate stomach. Often it lays the foundation for ill health in later life.

The next time a child seems croupy in the evening apply Vicks over throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth. Leave the bedclothing loose about the neck so that the arising vapors may be freely inhaled. This usually prevents a night attack.

If croup comes on without warning an application of Vicks usually brings relief in 15 minutes.

Vicks can be applied freely and often, even on the youngest child with perfect safety.

Wild Beasts Are Attacking School Children

Wenatchee, Wash., Jan. 30.—Wild animals from the mountains driven to lower altitudes by the severe Winter which has wiped out their ordinary sources of food, have become such a menace that even the younger pupils are carrying rifles.

Jimmy Fehlhaber was killed and partly devoured by a cougar.

Verne Smith, thirteen, who was attacked by a lynx, shot it with a small calibre rifle and was rescued from the fiercely fighting animal by a farmer who killed it with a shotgun.

Arthur Parsib, sixteen, had an encounter with a rabid coyote, but killed it.

BRIDGE DEATH VICTIM MAY BE SALEM MAN

Auburn, Me., Jan. 30. — An attempt to fix the identity of the alleged murder victim found under a bridge at Durham as Thomas Collins of Salem, Mass., was being made by officials investigating the case.

Collins, whose description tallies with that of the victim, had been given a lodging at the Auburn police station Monday night. He was comfortably dressed in good quality woolen [illegible] and said he had a little money but did not wish to spend it until he found work. He told the police he had formerly lived at Cambridge, Mass.

SOLDIER GUARDED AT FORT

Newport, R. I., Jan. 30.—Search for a local young man reported seen with Mary Gleason in the business district the night before her body was found in a moat near Fort Adams, is being made by Federal and city detectives today.

[illegible] the young man [illegible] from Boston [illegible] in conjunction with army officers and [illegible] police.

This development followed statements of Colonel Shar[illegible] at Fort Adams tending to discredit the confession of Private George C. Cordy, Fort Adams deserter who was arrested in Providence following receipt of his letter to Chief of Police Sweeney.

[illegible] Cordy [illegible] he said that his confession was prompted as a means of attracting notoriety to himself.

Meanwhile, Cordy, who is under heavy guard at the fort, appears indifferent to his possible fate.

He may be tried in the Federal District Court of this State, in which there is no capital punishment, or he may go before an army court martial that will possess the power to sentence him to death.

CORDY'S OWN STORY.

"I threw Mary Gleason over the moat last Tuesday," said Cordy's letter received by Chief Sweeney. "That is all I care to tell. I will give myself up in a day or two."

A postscript read: "At present I'm A. W. O. L. Have been two weeks."

Following his arrest at the home of his parents in Bridgham street, Providence, Cordy made the following confession at Providence police headquarters:

"I entered the grounds of the fort and overtook Mary near the moat. I recognized her as the girl I went with six months ago.

"I asked her why she threw me down in favor of that guy Henderson. She told me she liked Henderson better because he had an automobile.

TELLS OF STRUGGLE.

"I said to her, 'Why didn't you say hello?' She said 'Because I am not going to speak to you.'

"I grabbed her and threw her to the ground. She screamed. I said then, 'Don't scream or the sentries will hear you and it will be worse for you than for me because women are not allowed here.'

"Then I grabbed her again and she struggled. I don't remember whether I pushed her or whether she fell when I hit her. I stood on top of the moat and listened but I heard no noise from the moat. I then went back to town."

XMAS FUND HELPER MAKES HIT ON STAGE

Another clever Greater Boston girl who has aided the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund for several seasons has blossomed forth on the professional stage. She is sixteen-year-old Miss Gertrude Hartigan of No. 94 Carroll street, Chelsea, a second year pupil in St. Rose parochial school.

Gertrude Hartigan

She is playing the role of Sophie Smerdon in "The Wife Hunter" during its Boston engagement at the Plymouth Theatre. The engagement is a temporary one, as her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hartigan, wish to have her continue her schooling. Gertrude's young nephew Martin Goode is also in the cast of the same production.

Miss Hartigan has helped the American's Basket Fund during the past few seasons in amateur theatricals.

WIFE MAD AT 'DREAM HUSBAND

Mrs. Fowler Scoffs at the "Detached Personality" Story Told by Mate

By BERT FORD

North Andover, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Marguerite Munroe Fowler, [illegible] wife of Augustus (Bruzzi) Fowler, a Haverhill chauffeur, today reached out and took that "detached personality" [illegible] by the scruff of the [illegible] and dragged it down to a very matter of fact domestic realm.

[illegible] it as Augustus Fowler, her husband, Mrs. Fowler [illegible] Fowler's story [illegible] mind had been blank for the past five years, in which period he claimed he could not recall that he married her and that she [illegible].

Mrs. Fowler [illegible] denied [illegible] a dream bride, or that her children were 'dream babies.'

"There won't be any amnesia wrinkles, or whatever they call it. It will be made up of cold, cruel facts.

"I don't blame mother for crying [illegible] I felt like it myself to [illegible] our family affairs were dragged before the whole world and to have the inference given that perhaps he had never married me at all.

PRODUCES CERTIFICATE.

"But Bruzzi did and here's the marriage certificate which proves that Bruzzi was very much awake and himself, Augustus Fowler, every minute of those five years as he was when he took me to Salem, N. H., to be married.

"Bruzzi Fowler is a great [illegible]. If he has a motive in doing this [illegible] of acting, for that's all it is. He sure has his nerve with him and to think he dragged my name and my mother's and the children through the newspapers [illegible].

"We were living in Haverhill at the time. He was not acting this [illegible] me and the children and I left him. My mother rented this tenement two days ago so that Earl and I would have a home. She is supporting us until I find a job. I expect to get a position in Lawrence. I had to work as a stitcher in Haverhill after my marriage to Fowler.

"He's steady enough and always made $25 a week as chauffeur, but he seemed to prefer to support his parents or any other member of his family rather than look after me and his children.

DIVORCED FIRST WIFE.

"He told me about divorcing his first wife, who was Della Sonia, a French girl. There are two daughters by that marriage—one thirteen and the other 10 years of age. Their mother has married again.

"If his mind has been blank how could he have recalled all those details while I have been his wife? I didn't notice any mental void. He had plenty of temper though and he used it.

"It is true that he was injured when delivering leather in 1919 and that he was treated in Gale Hospital in Haverhill. As a matter of fact I cared for him after he was discharged. I met him through a girl friend. We were married soon after. He seemed all right at first.

"I could cite a thousand things to contradict his story. I'm not telling all I know. A man doesn't drive a truck every day and talk and laugh with his parents and buy them presents at Christmas with his mind a blank. He gave his mother shoes, his father tobacco and his sister slippers. That's how much of an amnesia victim Bruzzi Fowler was in those five years.

$200,000,000 LOANED IN N. Y. TO GERMANY

Washington, Jan. 30.—Germany's economic comeback is undergoing a close study by several government departments, chiefly to determine the permanency of her newly-established credit rating and the competitive power of the nation in world commerce.

This was made known today in connection with the information that in addition to $110,000,000 loaned to the government by American bankers, private industrial and commercial corporations in Germany have borrowed in excess of $200,000,000 in New York during the last six months.

DEAD MAN CAN NOT BE ELECTED TO OFFICE

"A dead man cannot be elected to office." That's that.

So reads the opinion handed down today by the full bench of the Supreme Court in the case of the late William A. Canty. Although he died November 3, the day before election, Canty received 2[illegible] votes as a candidate to represent the [illegible]th Suffolk District. William Malken, whose campaign was waged on stickers, received 11,065 votes.

The full bench of the Supreme Court today ordered a writ of mandamus to compel the board of election commissioners of Boston to certify to the Secretary of State the election of Malken.

The unusual decision, written by Chief Justice Rugg, follows:

"A dead man cannot be elected to office. This is not a doubtful question. It requires no discussion of legal principles. No process of reasoning is necessary to convince the intelligence. It is axiomatic. It is not open to debate. It is obvious to everybody.

"It is equally plain that the respondents (the board of election commissioners) were doing a vain thing and asserting an impossibility in certifying that William A. Canty was elected to office of Representative of the General Court. They were required to make a certificate to the secretary of the commonwealth of the 'election of persons appearing to be elected.' The word 'persons' means living human beings.

"The respondents ought to have stated in their certificate to the secretary the fact of the decease of Mr. Canty before the day of the election as they knew it indisputably to be."

BRAKEMAN FATALLY INJURED IN CAMBRIDGE

William Murphy, 35, of Allston, father of two children, a brakeman on the Boston & Albany Railroad, is dying in the Cambridge Relief Hospital. A freight engine ran over him while he was cleaning switches at Chestnut and Waverly streets, Cambridge. It is believed that on account of the ice and slush he was unable to get away from the tracks.

STRANGLER OF GIRL PAYS DEATH PENALTY

Michigan City, Ind., Jan. 30.—Peter Vergolini, a steel worker of Gary, Ind., was electrocuted here early today for the murder of Annie Tomlick, ten-year-old Serbian girl, whom he strangled to death at Gary last September. Vergolini met death with the same indifference that had marked his attitude since his arrest.

POLICE CRITICS CHALLENGED BY WILSON

Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson, through his secretary, John H. Merrick, today hurled defiance at critics of the police department, particularly those who have found fault with conditions in the Back Bay.

Merrick delivered his challenge at a hearing before the legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs on the bill which would restore to the Mayor the power of appointing the police commissioner.

"The police commissioner is ready to hear any complaints and he defies his accusers to produce evidence backing up their charges," he said. "The practice of attacking the police department has become quite a game."

H. Murray Pakulski, assistant corporation counsel, resumed the attack on alleged conditions in the Back Bay, recently brought to notice by his chief, Corporation Counsel E. Mark Sullivan.

"The Back Bay is full of houses of ill repute," he said. "It is an open secret; everyone knows it. It is not the province of the city law department to proceed in such cases."

The ghost of the police strike was dragged into the hearing when Abbot Rice of Newton asked what would happen during a police strike if the commissioner was under the Mayor's appointment.

35 PHONE GIRLS DEFY FLAMES

Hold Posts Till the Fire Routs Them at a $400,000 Blaze in Vermont

[illegible] Jan. 30.—A partial check up of 300 guests who were driven from the Hotel Rockledge, formerly the [illegible] House, when the hotel [illegible] was swept by fire, indicates that no lives were lost in the $400,000 blaze.

Although many of the guests were trapped in their rooms and had to be taken down ladders by firemen and volunteer workers, it is believed that all were gotten to safety.

The blazing rear wall of the rambling wooden hotel threatened to fall across Currier street upon the telephone exchange building where thirty-five women operators were handling the [illegible] business of Northern New England.

Wearing their coats and hats and with their personal belongings bundled at their feet, the girls stood at their switchboards and handled calls awaiting the word of Manager Fred A. [illegible] when to leave the building.

Telephone service was suspended when the operators and others were forced to flee, following a hot air explosion that blew in the windows in the building.

Two Salvation Army girls, asleep in their room on the third floor of the hotel when the fire broke out, were carried down a ladder to safety by Harold Winn, a taxicab driver.

LAW HALTS WEDDING OF "BEST-DRESSED WOMAN"

London, Jan. 30 (I.N.S.)—An apparently [illegible] obstacle in the Egyptian law halted the marriage of Mrs. Jean Nash, known as "Europe's best-dressed woman," and Prince Mohammed Sabit Bey, according to a dispatch today to the Express. They were to have been married in Cairo. On hearing that Mrs. Nash and the Prince were en route to [illegible] said there [illegible] might marry [illegible].

Mrs. Nash was born in New York State and was said to have been married to her first husband when she was seventeen years old.

The government estimates the total face value of outstanding securities issued by federal, provincial and [illegible] at $14[illegible] [illegible].

16 NEW MEN ON RED SOX ROSTER; TRAINING STARTS MAR. 1

37 PLAYERS GOING TO CAMP

Curtis Fullerton, the only resident of Boston playing on the Red Sox is first in line for the 1925 campaign. His signed contract was received at Fenway Park today. The former East Boston High school star, who has been with the Sox for three years, sent word along to President Bob Quinn that he is in splendid shape for the season's campaign, having put on more weight. Fullerton is spending the Winter at his uncle's camp at Holton, Me., chopping wood and hunting.

By FRED C. LANE

According to the Red Sox roster given [illegible] seven players will report to Manager Lee Fohl at New Orleans on March 1. Of that number fifteen are recruits.

The pitching department is well represented in the influx of prospects, with [illegible] new [illegible]. Three new [illegible] and [illegible] fielder [illegible] ivory.

Manager Fohl, considered one of the best handlers of pitchers in the game, is bending every effort, with the financial assistance of Owner Bob Quinn, to uncover new pitching talent. With the exception of Howard Ehmke and Alex Ferguson, the Sox are without a dependable man and [illegible] left [illegible] hurlers of promise.

Judging from the roster Manager Fohl feels he has sufficient talent in the outfield to run through the season. Ernest Vache, last season with the Dallas club of the Texas League, is the only new fly chaser.

Jim Prothro, for a time with the Senators and later in the season with Memphis along with William Rogell of Salina and M. T. Connolly of the Bay City team, are new infield prospects.

Rudolph Kallio, last season with Salt Lake; Joseph W. Kiefer of Bay City, Joseph Lucey from Jersey City, John W. Schelberg, late of Grand Rapids; Harold J. Wiltse, formerly of Mobile; Fred D. Wingfield, last season with Chattanooga; John F. Woods, formerly of Charleston, West Virginia; Patrick Noonan, last season with the Maine Independents and Louis Temple, semi-pro pitcher from Pennsylvania Independents, make up the list of new hurlers.

The club will stop at the Bienville Hotel in its 31 days' stay in New Orleans. April 1 and 2 will find them playing Mobile. A stopover will be made at Nashville for one game on the third. Louisville gets the next four days.

Leaving Louisville on the evening of the seventh the squad sets sail for home where two games will be played with the Braves on the 11th and 13th, Waterbury being sandwiched in for one contest on the 12th.

BOSTON SOCCER TEAM HOPES TO PLAY TOMORROW

Weather permitting, Indiana Flooring F. C. will play the Boston Soccer team at the Walpole street grounds in a league game tomorrow afternoon.

The visit of the New Yorkers will be their second to the Hub this season. Two months ago the Bostons put a 2-0 win across on the New Yorkers, but later in Gotham were defeated, 4 to 1, so tomorrow's contest will be the "rubber" game.

Starting tomorrow an admission charge of 75 cents will go into effect.

BERLENBACH TACKLES MARULLO TONIGHT

New York, Jan. 30.—Paul Berlenbach of New York and Tony (Young) Marullo of New Orleans meet in the feature ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Two leading football lights who are seeking fame and fortune within the ropes are also on the program. Ed (Heck) Garvey, former Notre Dame tackle, will face Gordon Munce, and Sully Montgomery, former Center College star, meets Clemente Saavedra, powerful Chilean.

CREED TELLS OF GREAT GROWTH OF SPORT!

Captain Percy Rolfe Creed who has been retained by the Boston Evening American to promote clean sports, has won his way to the front rank of writers on sports. His descriptions of the last international polo matches for the London Daily Mail have been claimed by competent critics to equal William Hazlitt's masterpieces and to be worthy of a [illegible].

[illegible] readers have [illegible] Captain Creed's recent talks on sport from WEEI. Captain Creed will be available for any sporting organization looking to the promotion of clean sports and his services will be gladly loaned to these organizations by the Boston American.

Speaking Thursday night at the City Club, Captain Creed said:

"I do not think that it is generally realized that sports and games have ceased to be a luxury or a mere recreation. They have become a necessity.

"Sports are the best antidote to the strain and stress of modern life. They are the best instruments if properly used, for developing character and I do not hesitate to maintain that the ethical, the idealistic, the spiritual side of sports is more important and more valuable to humanity even than the physical benefits which accrue from the exercise and development of the body.

"The physical development of sports and games is going great guns. We can all see that, but man cannot live by bread alone and sports are just as dependent on the health of the soul they enshrine as they are on the body which gives them physical expression. What of the spirit of sportsmanship? Who is looking after that?

"Supposing tomorrow you were to ask every schoolchild in Massachusetts what is a 'sport'? would you get 1 per cent. of complete and accurate answers? I know of one place where you might get a really high average of satisfactory answers. Some three years ago John P. Bowditch presented prizes to the schools in Framingham for the pupil who showed the best spirit of sportsmanship throughout the year, not for the best athlete but for the best 'sport' which is not always the same thing.

"And I may tell you without fear of contradiction that the sportsmanship prize is the most coveted trophy for the year in these schools. It is unnecessary to argue the public spirit and practical statesmanship of the lead which John Bowditch has given, and it is, I am sure, safe to say that there is at least one John Bowditch connected with and interested in every school in Massachusetts. Mr. Bowditch and his friends among whom are numbered Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., and Colonel Winship who are your guests here, have founded the Sportsmanship Brotherhood which I can describe to you in very few words—11 words, to be precise. Their motto is 'play fair,' and their object is 'to spread the spirit of sportsmanship throughout the world.'

"I hope I am not guilty of giving away stable secrets when I tell you that it is, I believe, their intention to concentrate their energy on establishing a spirit of sportsmanship prize in every school in Massachusetts. It is only necessary to add that their definition of the code of honor of a sportsman is that he

"Keep the rules.

"Keep faith with his comrade, play the game for his side.

"Keep himself fit.

"Keep his temper.

"Keep from hitting a man when he is down.

"Keep his pride under in victory.

"Keep a stout heart in defeat accepted with good grace.

"Keep a sound soul and a clean mind in a healthy body.

BOXERS FROM 3 STATES CLASH AT LAWRENCE

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE will be an intercity amateur boxing show between Boston, Lawrence, New Haven and New York at the Winter Gardens, Lawrence, tonight, under the direction of the Buffalo A. A. There will be contests at 112, 126, 135 and 147 pounds.

Amateur boxing is proving very popular in Lawrence. There has not been any professional ring contests in Lawrence since Johnny Cuddy closed his outdoor boxing stadium. In the days before legalized boxing in Massachusetts Johnny Cuddy gave New England fans some of the best matches ever booked in this part of the country.

Young Kloby, Y. D. champion, an aggressive fighter with a punch, was the big card in Lawrence. He drew tremendous gates in each of his contests.

Before Johnny Cuddy conducted boxing on such a large scale, Jim Cully staged many important shows. Steve Kennedy of Lawrence was his best card. The Steve Kennedy of a dozen years ago would have been able to defeat our present lightweight crop, with the possible exception of Benny Leonard, without much trouble.

AMATEUR boxing is drawing large crowds at Lawrence. The intercity show tonight is expected to play to a capacity gathering. Following is a list of the classes with the names of the contestants in each division.

112-POUND CLASS

Frankie Mason, Boston; Gene Clark, Lawrence; Allie Robinson, New Haven; Billy Grandeo, New York.

126-POUND CLASS

Mike Sarkus, Lawrence; Dick Hyland, Boston; Johnny Mack, New Haven; Ted Retymore, New York.

135-POUND CLASS

Joe Donohue, Lawrence; Johnny De Angelis, Boston; Tony Sacco, New Haven; Sam Marchese, New York.

147-POUND CLASS

Danny Morgan, Lawrence; Frankie Flynn, Charlestown; Al Grant, New Haven; Otto Wetzel, New York.

DAVE SHADE will probably receive an opportunity to battle Mickey Walker for the world's welterweight championship at an outdoor show to be staged in New York next Summer.

Walker, contrary to the claims of Leo Flynn, is not afraid to risk a meeting with Shade. When threatened with suspension by the New York Boxing Commission for refusing to meet Shade, Walker merely asked for the privilege of engaging in one bout before tackling his most dangerous contender. Mickey had been out of the ring for several months and did not wish to be "cold" when he opposed Shade. The New York ring moguls refused to grant Mickey's request. Walker then knocked out Bobby Barrett in Philadelphia and was suspended for daring to fight without the sanction of the New York Commission.

FOLLOWING his impressive victory over Mike McTigue, world's light-heavyweight champion at Newark, Walker told this writer he was now prepared to tackle Shade. There is so much interest in a Walker-Shade tussle that it will be saved for an open-air show where it will draw close to half a million dollars.

Shade will come to Boston next week to tackle Bob Lowrie, Scotch welterweight champion, in a ten round bout at a show to be staged by the Commercial A. C. at Mechanics Building on Tuesday night. Lowrie is an aggressive, two-handed fighter of the Walker school of milling. Shade will get some good experience when he faces the Scotchman.

SPORT BROADCAST by JIM MURPHY

ROBSON'S REMARK.

The writer was sitting aside of Tommy Robson at Mechanics building a couple of months ago. It was the night of the George Robinson-Billy Britton bout. Tommy was eagerly watching the proceedings and "going" with every punch. The affair was developing into quite a battle when Robinson dropped to one knee. Some said he slipped, others said he went down from the force of one of Britton's punches. It was a question. But George was up in a flash.

Tommy Robson

At this point Tommy grew reminiscent. He was thinking of some of his past great battles. He turned to the writer and said:

"Well, I've never been stopped yet and I hope that if I ever am it will be a good man that stops me." So saying he knocked wood. There was no braggadocio in his manner; he was simply stating facts.

Wednesday night Robson WAS stopped but it took two men to do it—Tiger Flowers, the sensational Negro middleweight, and Referee Johnny Brassill. After Flowers had tried for eight rounds to knock Tommy off his feet, Brassill stepped in and stopped the battle to save Tommy from further punishment. The bout will go down in the record books as a technical knockout for Flowers, but Robson was still standing on his two pins and swinging wildly when festivities were brought to an end.

TWENTY-ONE TO ONE.

One of the spectators at the bout and, by the way, a rooter for Robson, became so entranced by the machine-like way that Flowers propelled his long, powerful arms that he started to count the punches in the seventh round. Once he counted twenty-one for Flowers before Robson made a return. Another time he counted sixteen for the Negro to one for Robson. Of course this was not the ratio throughout the bout but it gives one a fair idea of the terrific pace Flowers was setting. Robson could never get started because Flowers' whirlwind attack would not allow him the chance to do so.

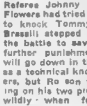
The refusal of immunity to Jimmy O'Connell, central figure in the famous Dolan-O'Connell baseball bribe case, means that Jimmy will not come East to testify unless he is indicted and then extradited. He is outside the jurisdiction of Commissioner Landis and cannot be summonded by Baseball's Judge like the other players who have testified. Unless the indictment and extradition is accomplished the present New York investigation will fall flat, for a probe without the principal actor is like a beef stew without the beef.



Jimmy O'Connel

COOPER'S RETURN.

The return of Carson Cooper to the Boston Bruins next week will be welcomed by followers of professional hockey in this city. Previous to receiving a muscle bruise, which had laid him up for the last five weeks, Cooper was the best scoring punch the Bruins had and his return should aid them greatly at the present pace they are traveling. The Bruins are not winning many games but they are losing some tough ones and when the stick shifts to the other hand they will bear watching.

NO IMMUNITY FOR JIMMY O'CONNELL

New York, Jan. 30.—Jimmy O'Connell, banished outfielder of the New York Giants, will not be granted immunity if he appears here in connection with the investigation into the Dolan-O'Connell bribery scandal.

This decision was wired today by District Attorney Banton in reply to a message received from Joseph McInerny, O'Connell's San Francisco lawyer, saying that the latter would refuse to come here unless he were promised immunity.

Dolan was questioned for almost an hour by Assistant District Attorney Brothers in the presence of a stenographer. Both declined to make any statement after the interview.

Pressed for a statement, Dolan flung back:

"See Mr. Brothers. He knows all about it."

Before Dolan appeared Leslie M. O'Connor, secretary of Commissioner Landis, conferred with Brothers. He brought with him testimony in the case before Landis and produced telegrams exchanged between the principals.

O'Connor also produced testimony of Emil Yde, Pittsburgh pitcher, before the commissioner. Yde had been quoted as saying that "other people" were involved in the baseball scandal. That interview he repudiated before the commissioner.

A telegram to Landis from Willie Cunningham, ex-Giant outfielder, denying an interview which quoted him as having said that Ross Young of the Giants had told him the alleged bribe in the case had been offered during a "kidding bee," also was produced by O'Connor.

John Couch, Philadelphia National pitcher, will reach New York tomorrow from his home at Palo Alto, Cal., to testify, Brothers said.

Art Fletcher, Phillies' manager, and George Kelly of the Giants, one of the players exonerated by Landis, will be here Monday, Brothers said.

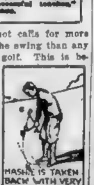
Young also is enroute to New York from his home in Texas.

Inside Golf

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 81 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

The mashie shot calls for more compactness in the swing than any other stroke in golf. This is because the mashie pitch calls for extreme accuracy. The ball must be hit just so for the desired result. This accuracy often is lost through too much looseness in the wrists in the back swing. There is very little wrist action until near the top of the back swing, when the wrists do break upward some. This is a natural bending upward of the wrists, not a forced action such as takes place when the player makes his wrists break the mashie blade directly back from the ball. You throw the mashie head exactly as if it were a weight on the end of the shaft, making it attain its maximum velocity at the instant it hits the ball. Practice drawing it back with the idea that the head of the club is merely a weight that is to be thrown into the ball. That will help you get the "feel" of the blade in your fingers.



MASHIE IS TAKEN BACK WITH VERY LITTLE WRIST ACTION, A-B. TOO MUCH LOOSENESS IS SHOWN BY A-C.

NURMI TRIES FOR RECORD AT 11-8 MILES

New York, Jan. 30 (A. P.)—Paavo Nurmi races again tonight in the annual meet of the Morningside Athletic Club at the 102d Engineers' Armory, where he appeared in the Fordham games on the third and last night of his record-breaking journey from New York to Chicago and return. He hopes to set a new record for one and one-eighth miles in this run.

Perhaps greater interest, however will attach to the second appearance of Ugo Frigerio of Italy, champion walker of the Olympics, against Willie Plant of the United States who defeated him on Wednesday.

Frigerio must obtain permission from the Italian amateur authorities to appear in this meet and word is expected from them today. It is believed here that the American request will be granted. The distance will be 4,000 meters.

Willie Ritola also is expected to compete, although he will not be pitted against Nurmi. He will start at scratch in a two-mile handicap event, a short distance for his style, although his recent accomplishments have indicate that he can sprint when necessary.

WALTER JOHNSON DROPS NEGOTIATIONS FOR CLUB

Los Angeles, Jan. 30.—Walter Johnson, the pitcher, en route for his home in Reno, Nev., announced that he regretfully had dropped negotiations for the purchase of the Vernon ball club.

Johnson said that, although he would have been able to come to terms with Ed Maier, owner of the Vernon club, he was unable to reach an agreement with William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the Los Angeles ball park, in which the Tigers would have to play the majority of their home games.

Kid McCoy Took His Ring Name From Famous Criminal Character—Showed No Mercy to His Opponents—Got His Start in Boston

This is the sixteenth of a series of articles on old time athletes by George V. Tuohey, famous sports promoter, who has been prominent in athletics for thirty-five years.

Kid McCoy, the heavyweight boxer recently sentenced for murder in Los Angeles, got his real start as a pugilist in and around Boston, and, in view of his later career and his present difficulty, his selection of the name by which he became world famous may prove interesting, especially as the writer feels that the story is here told for the first time.

His right name is Norman Selby. He drifted into Boston some years ago, a rather debonair chap, of about 145 pounds, and declared that he was a pugilist ready to take on any welterweight who cared to meet him. Howie Hodgkins, then one of the best trainers and handlers of ringsters, took the young fellow in hand, but Howie at first could make nothing of him. Asked what his name was the young chap replied, "Oh, call me Kid McCoy."

The selection of the name surprised everybody, as the lad appeared to be a clean-cut fellow. Asked why he selected such a moniker he said he did so because at that time the name of "Kid McCoy" meant about the same as did that of Jesse James of a previous generation.

In fact, he got the idea, he said, from witnessing a safe blowing act in a melodrama at the Old Columbia Theatre, in which the original Kid McCoy and Spike Hennessy, had appeared. Both men had long prison records and had just shortly before been released from long terms in a Western penitentiary.

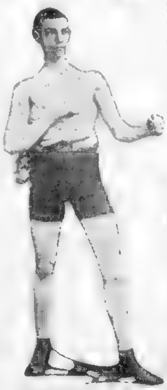
Father Was Minister

As more and more became known of the real Selby, that he came from a most respectable family of Rush County, Ill., and that his father had been a minister, the selection of the name of the noted burglar puzzled everybody, until one night he confessed that he had a penchant for reading dime novels and that he had read the "Lives of Kid McCoy and Spike Hennessey," which had been sold during the performance. He added that McCoy's skill in his profession was what appealed to him and for that reason he picked the name by which he was later to be known in ring circles.

McCoy started off by whipping Jim Scully in five rounds at New Bedford, but according to those who watched the battle, as well as Hodgkins story, McCoy did not show any too much gameness either before or during the contest. In fact, Howie has always said that he had to keep McCoy from jumping the ropes by threats of using a blackjack on him, and that is why Hodgkins declined to have any more to do with him.

But if McCoy showed any streak of yellow in that contest he more than made up for it in his later careers, for he proved one of the most relentless and cruel ringmen of his period, if not of all time.

After a few minor bouts, the Kid was matched with Jack Wilkes of St. Louis for twenty-five rounds under the auspices of the [illegible] Suffolk A. C., then operating in the West Newton street armory. McCoy won in two rounds and as Wilkes had previously held Tommy Ryan for seventy-six rounds, McCoy's fame was established. He fought a few more fights around Boston, then went abroad, where he battled in England, then went to South Africa at the time of the discovery of gold in the Transvaal, and [illegible] returned to Boston, to fight Dick O'Brien, Mysterious Billy Smith and others.



KID McCOY IN YOUTH.

McCoy Fierce Hitter

McCoy was originally so slight in build and his hitting so [illegible] effective the belief was current that he "doctored" his bandages, which were first introduced in glove contests about that time. It was thought that he placed plaster of paris beneath the bandages and as this material dried very fast and hard it was the secret of the terrific cutting up of his opponents. Whether there was any real basis to this suspicion has never been decided, but when McCoy was forced to do the bandaging in the ring, as he was compelled to do with both Billy Smith and Dick O'Brien, it was noted that McCoy's hitting fell off and both men were able to hold him to draws over the twenty-five round distance then in vogue in Boston.

In contrast to the evidence of cowardice he showed with Scully, his courage against Tommy Ryan, Maher, Sharkey, Creedon, Steve O'Donnell, Joe Choynski and others indicate that his showing against Scully must be attributed to stage fright.

McCoy, even after he became famous, made his home in Boston for some time, but the bright lights of Broadway made a greater appeal to him and he was a figure for many years in the night life of New York, until he went to the coast to act in the movies, not as the hero of any drama in which boxing was featured, but as the foil for the leading man, with McCoy on the losing end of whatever form the action took.

WEINERT SIGNS TO BOX SHARKEY HERE FEB. 10

Jack Sharkey, Roxbury heavyweight, has been matched to clash with Charley Weinert of Newark, N. J., recent conqueror of Luis Firpo, in a ten round bout to be staged by the Suffolk A. A. at Mechanics Building on February 10.

Sharkey recently scored a victory over Sully Montgomery, former Centre College football star. The Roxbury fighter won nine of the ten rounds.

Weinert is one of the leading heavyweights in the world. He gave Firpo a decisive setback, cutting the Wild Bull to ribbons. He later stopped Italian Jim Herman and Joe Downey.

Tex Rickard rated Weinert fourth when he classified the world's leading heavyweights. Dempsey, Wills and Gibbons were the only men placed ahead of Weinert in the [illegible].

"I don't object to Dempsey being rated in first position," said Billy McCarney, manager of Weinert, during a recent visit to Boston, "but I think it a great injustice to Weinert to rank Wills and Gibbons a couple of safety first boxers ahead of him. Charley wouldn't have any trouble defeating those cream puff boys."

Sharkey recently gave Weinert a sensational battle. Weinert had the best of the milling in the early rounds. Sharkey then came to the front and had all the best of the milling in the closing chapters.

Vitamins to nourishment are what a spark-plug is to a motor. To sustain vitality, the body needs three thousand calories of food daily, yet if this food is not activated by vitamins the body is unable to thrive in health or strength.

Scott's Emulsion brings to a weakened system vitamin-activated nourishment of highest degree. A little taken regularly helps wonderfully to build strength and resistance.

If you would keep strong and vital—activate your diet with Scott's Emulsion.

Martha Lee's Radio Chat

BROADCAST THROUGH STATION WNAC
THE SHEPARD STORES

By Martha Lee.

THE WHY OF PIES

TO vary our chats, today I'm going to answer all in one breath, lots of questions that have come in on pie problems.

Q.—Why do you say set pastry to bake in a hot oven?

Ans.—A pie is set to cook in a hot oven so that the under crust may be baked before it becomes soaked with liquid from the filling.

Q.—Why cover pastry tight and let stand some hours in a cool place before rolling and baking?

Ans.—By standing, the moisture acts on the gluten in the flour and [illegible] its elasticity, rendering [illegible] roll (or stretch) the paste into a thin sheet. Pastry is covered to exclude the air which would dry [illegible] the outside. It is kept in a cool place to keep the enclosed air cool.

Q.—Why roll pastry with a light rather than a firm and heavy motion?

Ans.—Pastry is rolled with a light motion that the air may not be pressed from it.

Q.—Why is some pastry tough?

Ans.—If pastry is to be tender or [illegible] plenty of fat must be used. Flour and water make a tough mixture; a tender paste is not possible unless shortening equal to half the weight of the flour be used.

Q.—Why use pastry flour?

Ans.—Pastry flour absorbs a comparatively small measure of water and thus is well adapted to pastry making.

Q.—Why use a small quantity of water?

Ans.—Fat and flour, the main ingredients in pastry, used alone make a crumbly mixture that cannot be handled; just enough water should be used to render the flour and shortening smooth and pliable.

Now just a few recipes—

RECIPE NO. 881.

COFFEE MERINGUE PIE.
2 tablespoons granulated gelatine.
½ cup cold water.
2 cups hot coffee infusion.
½ cup sugar.
2 eggs.
⅛ teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
1 cup cream.
1 tablespoon sugar.
Pastry.

Soak the gelatine in the cold water and add the hot coffee infusion and ½ cupful of sugar. Stir until dissolved and pour on to the egg yolks beaten slightly with one tablespoonful of sugar. Cook in the top of a double boiler until thickened. Remove from the fire and add the salt and vanilla. Let cook, stirring often. When beginning to set, beat hard, fold in the egg-whites and cream, both stiffly beaten. Cool until the mixture is stiff enough to pile up well on the spoon, then turn into a baked pastry shell. Chill thoroughly before serving.

And a little unusual—

RECIPE NO. 882.

CRANBERRY AND PRUNE PIE.
1½ cups halved cranberries.
1 cup prunes.
1 tablespoon butter.
¾ cup sugar.
1 tablespoon flour.
Pastry.

Mix together the halved cranberries, the prunes cooked until soft and cut in small pieces, the sugar and the flour. Turn into a pie plate lined with pastry, dot over with butter, cover with strips of pastry and bake in a moderately hot oven (450 degrees) for 20 minutes.

And lastly—

RECIPE NO. 883.

CHOCOLATE NUT PIE.
2 medium sized boiled potatoes.
1 tablespoon butter.
¼ teaspoon salt.
½ cup powdered sugar.
1 cup finely chopped nutmeats.
¼ pound cake milk chocolate.
1 cup pastry flour.
½ teaspoon baking powder.
⅛ teaspoon salt.
4 tablespoon shortening.
1 egg.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
Whipped cream.

To make the filling, mash the potatoes, add the butter and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, and beat together. Add the sugar, nuts, melted chocolate and vanilla. Beat together until light and fluffy. Set aside to cool. To make the pastry, sift the pastry flour, baking powder and ⅛ teaspoonful salt together, cut in the shortening thoroughly, and add the egg unbeaten. Mix and turn on a floured board; roll thin. Bake on inverted muffin tins in a hot oven (500 degrees F.) for about 10 minutes. Cool and fill with the chilled mixture. Garnish with whipped cream.

NORA LEE A Story of Flaming Youth

Heart and Soul of 1924 Flapper Laid Bare in Best Story by Author of "Chickie"

START THE STORY HERE TODAY

Margaret Meadows married Will Lee at seventeen. His dissolute habits soon made her miserable. The night he raised his hand to his two-year-old child in a drunken rage she slipped from his home with her baby. Margaret supported her daughter by teaching school in several villages, finally settling in Fairdale, where she met Andrew and they fell in love. But he was tied to an invalid wife and Margaret refused to let him leave her. Nora, at seventeen, fell in love with Dane Herrick. Andrew was killed in an auto accident. Nora met Maxwell Reed, who made love to her. Margaret died and Nora was left alone. She plunged into a fast set of flappers. Dane upbraided her for her association with Max.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY

By ELENORE MEHERIN

"IT can't be fixed up, Mickey. I didn't throw him. And it's no use talking about it. It's too late now."

Mickey pulled off his hat and ran his hand in a disconsolate swiftness through his sunny hair. "Are you sure it's too late?"

She wondered if Dane had sent him, and her eagerness to know mastered her. She asked.

"A True Sport"

"No! Well, of course he didn't. I took it on myself. Seems as though somebody in the world ought to be happy."

"Mickey! I thought you were a walking advertisement of 'blissful though wedded.'"

He turned painfully scarlet. "I am. Con's the best kid in the world. I'm just fagged. The law's a hard game. The old man counts on me to make a success. Hate to disappoint him. He's been a pretty good old dad to me."

They had climbed a [illegible]. Mickey stood bare-headed, big and [illegible]—blond gladiator with a sheepish grin on his lips.

"You don't mind your big brother Mick, Nora Lee? Remember, you were only a little girl when I first met you. Just thought I could do some little thing. Hate to see you unhappy."

Nora Lee's throat ached. She gripped Mickey's hands thinking: "You're unhappy, too—but you're gamer than I. You're a sport. I'm not!"

He parted with a laughing: "All the same a hundred years from now, Norry, eh?"

Connie's Opinion

She thought wistfully of Mickey Grant. What had he wanted from marriage that Connie wouldn't give? All the world was old and tired and disappointed.

Connie enlightened her: "You're darn lucky, Nora Lee! You ought to be singing at the top of your voice that you've nabbed a fellow like Rit hard. Let me tell you Dane Herrick was never your mate! Either Richard or Max is a thousand times more suitable.

"Oh no! I'm not sore or anything, but these young fellows certainly have their nerve—they marry on a shoe string and we've got to do the lacing. Humph!"

She stood before a mirror surveying her long, thin lines: "Mickey Grant would like to see me have a child! Fancy that on $250 a month! He liked well enough to gad before we were married. Now he wants to stick in this house night after night. I suppose he thinks a child would anchor me for fair! Why didn't he marry some plodding Cornelia if that is what he wanted?"

She sauntered to the living room and poured out small glasses of port wine. Nora Lee raised hers with a winning: "Well, here's to your dear old Mickey no matter if he'd like you to have triplets. He's a peach."

Connie sniffed. "I suppose I'm a quitter, but good lord we're not married a year yet. Of course, he only said it half laughing. What I'm mad about is this—he said I'm ruining my looks by sleeping too little and drinking too much. And he meant it. And I dont go half as much as I did when we were only engaged."

Nora Lee said hungrily: "You've loved each other about five years—nearly six, Connie."

"Yes—matrimony seems to be a sure cure for love. You think you lost yours. You're mistaken. You took the one way on earth to keep it. Am I to be your matron of honor?"

"There won't be any. We're going away quietly."

"When?"

"In two weeks. Well, I have to go now. Be good Connie! Mickey's worth it."

She dismissed Connie and her troubles. For none of us are prophets and we never know when the life of another is making or marring our own.

Fear Grips

In two weeks she would be married. But she bought no trousseau. Richard said gaily: "Wait—we'll shop together in New York—Paris if you like."

She accepted this absently. Now that the time drew near she was frightened. She allowed her affairs to drift. She became childishly willful and refused to give up her job until the very end.

But the time fastened on her none the less. Richard bought a house in San Mateo. He had it redecorated. When it was finished they drove down.

It was a big place with a red brick wall and a driveway between poplars. He turned the small fascinating eyes on her: "Well, darling?"

"I feel queenly."

"You are!"

They walked through the rooms. He said impishly: "Your room," and flung up shades that gave on an old rose garden. "Now, my room. And here—our room—"

"Taking a Chance"

She colored with sudden [illegible] tion of her breath. She stamped her foot. And all the way riding home she punished him with her [illegible] irritab[illegible]. At the door [illegible] penitently.

"Richard [illegible] not—"

"You're excited [illegible]—"

"Well, you see [illegible] I can be very fair."

"I'll take a [illegible]"

A few days [illegible] were having [illegible] a dance. Mickey [illegible] sprawled [illegible] tapped her foot and shook [illegible] tails vigorously: "Mickey, the guests are here."

Mickey got up with a shamed grin: "Scuse everybody. Here's to sleep! May I never catch up with it!"

Then they drank to the bride-to-be and the bridegroom. Nora Lee wore a gown of white, the black curls caught with a hoop of pearls. Her face had a wistful depth; the gypsy lure Margaret so loved.

After four drinks Mickey became teasing and brotherly. He insisted on holding Nora Lee's arm. He whispered almost loud enough for Richard to hear. "I saw the real one today. I told him something."

"What——?" She bit her lips.

Mickey said: "I told him something, Norry. You watch out."

At the Prohibition Party

When Richard helped Nora Lee with her wrap he ran his hand down her long bare arms. She flung from him with a sharp, "Hurry! Get my gloves!"

The imagined presence of Dane Herrick moved before her. It watched with hot, scorning eyes.

She was tormented and unhappy. What had Mickey told him? Why must she watch out? Was he coming tonight, a Lochinvar, to gallop away with her at his side?

She laughed with a soft bitterness. Oh, if there were men who loved like that! If he were only one of them—if he had but sense to know that she grew weak at the murmur of his name! That she was waiting with famished and aching heart for him to call, "Come back, Nora Lee!"

Top of the World

DRAWN BY WALT VAN ARSDALE

Copyright, 1924, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WHERE is the Top of the World? Some say it is in Thibet, others claim that the topmost peak of Mt. McKinley is that often-discussed place. But these are the opinions of hardy explorers.

If you want the real facts, ask any pair of lovers. For the Top of the World to each true lover is where he holds his loved one in his arms and she snuggles happily and safely close to him.

The winds of the world may beat about them—storms may threaten, but where she is and where he is, THAT is the Top of the World to them.

SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

Former President of the American Medical Association

YOU were born barefooted.

No! Don't ask! I really don't think you were born with your boots on.

Primitive man probably lived and died barefooted.

As he exercised his feet by having them bear his weight and by subjecting them to the friction of walking, nature came to his relief with one of her great laws of evolution—nature always tends to adjust man to his environments.

Nature did it in this instance by providing man with thick, tough, and—in the natural state—almost leathery soles for his feet.

But the time came when either the rigors of climate or the sharp stones and splinters on the earth forced him to protect his feet.

He did this by evolving the oldest historic footgear, which was the sandal.

It protected the bottoms of the feet and, aside from the fact that the thongs tended to wear sores between the toes and around the ankles, it left the natural position of the foot undisturbed.

All pictures of enlightened Greece and Rome at her best, all pictures [illegible]

[illegible] China and Japan [illegible] women of certain classes in China alone being the exception.

It is only the highly-civilized people of the Occident, where there is much talk about the natural law and [illegible] the [illegible] ings which prevent all natural ventilation of the feet. The net result is that the secretions are thrown out abundantly, undergo decomposition and—you know the worst.

These leather boxes [illegible] ing [illegible] cause the foolish [illegible] and grunt.

These same leather feet [illegible] are generally provided with high heels. These high heels further distort the feet by decentering the weight of the body, breaking down the graceful arches, thus crippling these foolish mutilators of their own persons.

Now, if you have perspiring, smelly, corn-grown, bunion-bulging, [illegible] feet, or if you are [illegible] threaten you with these calamities, let me enter a plea in your own behalf, for your own health, for your own happiness.

If mistaken vanity compels you to wear these foolish footgears, by all means when you are at home where no one can see you and discover that you are really a sensible person, wear sandals.

For men they are so comfortable! For women they are so—chic!

BEAUTY OF THE NAILS

By Maria Jeritza,

Famous Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

IT is pleasant to note that the average woman nowadays keeps her finger-nails always attractively and daintily groomed. Doubtless your own nails at this moment are immaculate and as lovely as pink pearls.

Nearly every woman has her own method of bringing about this desirable result. She may care for them herself or may trust the work to a professional manicurist.

Here is a plan for daily caring for the nails that you may like to try because it saves time and in the long run gives best results. You may substitute peroxide for lemon juice or make other adaptation to your own needs, but you will find that the suggestions I am making are practical and take but a few moments each day.

Begin by soaking your fingers for a minute or two in warm water. In case your nails are dry or brittle, with roughened cuticle, it will be advisable to use olive oil or a soothing hand lotion, instead of water.

Now dampen a bit of absorbent cotton in lemon juice and wrapping it on an end of your orange-stick clean carefully beneath your nails.

Now examine your nail-tips closely. Are they beautifully shaped in an exquisite filbert oval? There is no excuse for aid of a good steel file, the cost of which is negligible, and a little patience, which costs nothing, and less than five minutes you should be able to shape them perfectly.

Remember that your nails should form unbroken ovals just long enough to protect your finger-tips nicely, and guard your delicate sense of touch. Shape the nails first with the coarse side and then with the fine side of your file, until your artistic eye is entirely satisfied with the result.

Now comes the step over which so many amateur manicurists stumble—the grooming of the pretty half-moons at the base of the nails. These should be ever so gently pressed back, but not with the bare orange-stick.

It should have wrapped about it absorbent cotton moistened with olive oil, lemon juice, cold cream—whichever is most soothing to your skin. If you press too hard you may bruise your nails and tiny white flecks may appear. Press back the cuticle ever so gently and every day.

Your nails are now ready for the last step in their cleansing and beautifying process, which consists in giving them a finishing polish with a good nail paste or nail powder just to prove to yourself that they are well-groomed. Here is an excellent powder for the purpose:

Pulverized starch........¼ ounce
Powdered boric acid......¼ ounce
Talcum powder...........¼ ounce
Tincture of carmine......10 drops

This polish should bring out all the natural, rosy sheen of your nails and help to keep them at their beauty best.

CORRECT MANNERS

DEAR MRS. BEEKMAN:

[illegible] of us girls are starting a club. We are endeavoring to get about ten or fifteen girls. Now we are looking for a name for our club.

The initials of these four girls are N. A. R. and M.

Can you make some word out so as to make a name for our club?

MOLLIE.

HOW about the Marn Club? This is a beautiful word to sound it must be, because it combines m, r and n, the consonants that Edgar Allan Poe said always make euphonious, poetic words. Or, would you like to have it "Marno," adding an "o," with the idea that the new members are to be "taken into the circle?" Incidentally this, too, makes a love word.

DEAR MRS. BEEKMAN:

Where does the mistress of the house sit at a dinner, beside her husband, or on the opposite side of the table? MRS. I. McG.

AT the opposite side of the table. This "spreads" the hospitality, and also gives the opportunity of indicating honor places: That is, at the right of the husband is seated the woman who is guest of honor, and at the right of the wife is seated the man who is the guest of honor. At the left of each is the "second honor" place.

I[illegible] poison [illegible] of the [illegible] the [illegible]

[illegible] Louis XIV and Louis V had [illegible] lords' offered [illegible] by chemists. And after [illegible] the Hague Convention forbade the use of "poison or poisoned weapons" and projectiles whose "sole object it was to spread deadly or asphyxiating gases."

It is one of [illegible] the first great war after the Hague Convention witnessed the first use of poisonous gas. But even before 1914, the War Offices of various countries were busy interpreting the meaning of the word "deleterious," and soon it was decided that the term applied only to gases which caused permanent harm. One [illegible] pointed out that the Convention prohibited poisons but not disagreeable fumes.

While these modest explosives were being perfected, the first German gas attack took place on the Ypres front in 1915. And within a few months [illegible] gas, an asphyxiant, was being used by all the warring factions. This introduced a new type of gas in addition to the irritant gases, known as lethal gases. [illegible] The gas known as [illegible] which produce immediate death are [illegible] containing [illegible]. The chief disadvantages of these is that [illegible] temporary [illegible] or headaches. In the case of the second class of lethal gases, a man who does not notice that he has been gassed may die suddenly as much as forty-eight hours later.

It is a striking example of the quality of human nature to see that while one group of persons is raising a cry against the cruelties of war, another group is working overtime to discover new implements of destruction.

In the use of gas, a new weapon of war has been found which supplements without displacing the existing weapons. Gas will penetrate where explosives and shrapnel will not. A gas heavier than air will settle in trenches and remain there.

It will permeate the deepest dugout. Even the gasmask, the chief defense against this deadly substance, is ineffective when the persistence of the gas outlasts the protective powers of the mask.

DAILY SHORT STORY

LET HIM HAVE IT

By Maria Luttrell

"I[illegible] again," [illegible] Nancy Morland, coming back to the sunroom where two of Grace Waldron's best friends waited to see her.

"The nerve of the creature! I suppose she thinks that she will be [illegible] in to visit him, raise a scene and give the whole, horrid affair away to trusting Grace. Why is it that a wife never hears of her husband's unfaithfulness until the rest of the world is wagging its wicked tongue?"

"I daresay," smiled Jane Reynolds, "it's because a wife, being disillusioned about the gentleman in question, thinks there is no other woman beside herself silly enough to be taken in by him! Therefore she is unsuspecting."

Nancy Laughed.

Nancy laughed, then grew sober.

"Mean as it sounds, I hoped that Jim would die last week when he was so violently ill. He was at this girl's apartment, when the attack occurred. The doctor told Grace Jim was taken sick at the club and when he brought him home, mumbling and raving and calling the girl by name, the doctor explained that Jim thought he was at the office dictating. I would like to dictate a little, just a very little, to Jim and the girl, too. And I'm going to do it when he gets well enough to stand the shock."

"Keep out of it!" said Jane. "We're doing enough to come here every day and prevent that fool girl from getting into the house. What Grace doesn't know, won't hurt her! What's the girl's name, anyway?"

"Jeanette Roberts! I wish you could have seen the baby lamb coat she had on today. This year's mode, if you please, and thrifty old Grace wearing a ten-year-old sealskin. It makes me mad, clear through! Hush, here comes Grace!"

Grace Waldron came in briskly, her fine gray eyes lighting happily at sight of her good friends. "How dear you are, to come every day to inquire about Jim. He had a wonderful night and ate a good breakfast, an egg, toast and coffee. Nurse says he will be able to sit up tomorrow."

"That's good," commented Nancy. Then affectionately, "You must relax, now that the strain is over, and sleep every day to make up your own loss of rest. Doctor Zemp says that you did not even close your eyes the two nights Jim was so frightfully ill."

"I'm all right and happy that I had such physical strength when Jim needed me. I was the only one who could quiet him. Even in his delirium, he seemed to know when I left the room. It's wonderful how strong love is, even in the very presence of death. Good old Jim! He tried to comfort me in case he died, by telling me a foolish story about himself. To keep from grieving if he had to leave me!"

Jane [illegible] Nancy, ill at ease, pushed a pillow up against her back, just to change her position and give herself time to think of an answer in case Grace asked embarrassing questions.

But Grace, without hesitation, went on:

"When he thought he had to die, he called me and told me that he didn't want me to grieve and to spoil my life, that he was not good enough for me to suffer over him."

Nancy thought that if she did not say something, she would surely have to scream from a sheer attack of nervousness. "You've been a wonderful wife, Grace. You've made Jim. Everyone knows that."

"No, I've just loved him."

Glint of Tears.

There was a glint of tears on the long lashes over the quiet gray eyes. "Even if—if he hadn't loved me, I would have been happy just to love him." She waited for a minute, then said, smiling wistfully:

"Funny how, ill as he was, he remembered to try to shield me from grieving for him after he was gone. I started to tell you about it. He tried to convince me that he had had a naffair with some horrid woman, that he hadn't been loyal to me. Think of Jim, willing to make up a story like that on what might have proved to be his death bed, just to spare my feelings!

"Of course, there was nothing to back up the tale! Unless he went to some doctors' meeting [illegible] to a conference with your Tom, Nancy, about something down at the office, he has been home by five-thirty every day since we have been married. He had to go out of town often but it was always on business."

Fortunately for the palpitating friends, the nurse came to the door. "Mr. Waldron wants you to bring your friends up for a minute to see him. I 'phoned the doctor and he said it would be all right."

A rather gaunt face smiled up at them from the pillows. "Hello," Jim said, cheerfully enough. "What good sports you have been to come every day to brace up my girl. I'll never forget it. She's been a darn good pal. I'll tell you that!"

Sick man's stuff, mentally raved Nancy, who hated him cordially. She watched, unmoved, a bright tear roll down the pillow. It was bright, and for a second, glistened like—like the diamond pin his stenographer had worn on her flat chest that very day, at his own door. She knew who had paid for that bauble. Tom had told her, sorrowfully. He loved his partner, hated to see him act the fool.

"We're going on a real honeymoon, Grace and I, soon as I can travel, about next week! Going abroad and take that leisurely trip we've been planning for years."

Grace laughed, happily, it seemed. "It's nice to dream about but when he gets on his feet, he'll talk about doctors and nurses' bills and how [illegible] doctor and I have made plans, too, and ours are practical." Grace drew her breath sharply, as if she spoke with an effort.

Jim turned his head to look at her. "What are your plans, honey?"

A red spot like a signal light burned in the woman's cheeks. "Well, we're going to Bermuda, you and I and—" the barest second of hesitation, "that pretty little stenographer in your office. I will be there to walk with you and read to you and she will keep up your correspondence and help to amuse you."

If only that nurse, waiting in the hall, could have known how her patient's pulse was racing!

Preparing to Go.

"Miss Roberts was planning a little trip down there this month anyway—she had evidently asked you to secure passage for her—there was an item about it in your notebook, so I am sure she can arrange to go just a little sooner. We'll all enjoy escaping the penetrating cold of early spring up here. You must help me select a new frock and a smart coat, Nancy. I want something quite stunning. Bermuda is filled with fashionables at this time of year."

Oh, how Nancy did want to applaud the subtlety, the cunning of her best friend! Right while they had been pitying her and bemoaning her stupidity, she had been fortifying herself.

Nancy glanced at Jim. Hate flamed in her eyes. Jim was looking at her. She knew that something psychic flashed electrically between them. He saw himself stripped of his egotism, saw himself a middle aged Lothario. Not a happy spectacle!

"Nothing doing!" he jerked out quickly. "It's Europe for us, just us!" Then he turned his eyes toward Nancy again. "Tell old Tom to do me a favor while I'm gone! Let him discharge Miss Roberts—I want a young man secretary when I come back. Women are too damned emotional, business women, I mean.

Can't Stand Perfume.

"I can't stand perfume and that woman uses quarts of it. Makes me nauseated to think about it! Tell Tom to shake her down, easy enough, he'll know how, before we get back. How about that trip to Europe Grace honey? Want to take me?" His eyes burned in his head, like live coals. He stretched out a thin hand that shook as if palsied.

Grace smiled down at him. She patted his hand in a detached sort of way, as a woman might soothe any troubled little child who had turned to her for comfort.

"My policy in marriage consists of one vital thing," she said, looking across the bed at Nancy whom she loved devotedly. "If a husband wants anything, let him have it!"

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

THERE was a case in Missouri where a brother married his own sister. In case of a fight they could both go home to the same mother.

AND if they didn't get along well he couldn't blame it on her folks any more than she could blame it on his.

A MARRIAGE like this helps to cut down the number of family relatives.

THE bride said that by marrying her brother she didn't have to bother to change her name.

AND the groom claims that if they ever separate he won't have to support her because nobody ever heard of a man paying alimony to his sister.

BUT of course there are thousands of guys paying it to other men's sisters.

THIS odd marriage was an elopement. Can you imagine a fellow going in to his father and asking for his sister's hand?

THE parents couldn't be partial and tell his son that he wasn't good enough for his daughter.

AND no matter how sore the groom gets at the bride he can't talk about her mother.

AND the bride can't knock her father-in-law.

WHEN he asked her to marry him she couldn't tell him that she'd be a sister to him because she already was.

HE escaped a lot of the tortures of the average engagement. He never had to sit on the sofa and look at the family album.

AND he never had to be afraid of her mother coming down into the parlor and telling him that it was time to go home.

AND he didn't have to waste three or four hours a day talking to her over the telephone trying to get her to let him call.

HIS romance was nothing but a courtship with all the red tape removed.

BUT the parents are now trying to have the marriage annuled and have suggested that Cupid take a few lessons in marksmanship.

They Taste a New Kind of Butter

By Foxy Grandpa

"I DON'T see that these nights here in Arabia are so different from nights in other countries that they had to write a book about them," said Bobby, looking up at the clear heavens of that Oriental country.

"The book is not written about the nights, Bobby," I laughed. "'The Arabian Nights' is a book of stories."

"Oh," said Bobby, "I see."

We waited out in the courtyard of the inn where we were stopping until the white-robed servant slid out of the doorway like a ghost and told us that dinner was ready. Then he bowed low and backed into the doorway, like a disappearing spirit.

We went into the dining room, sat down and commenced eating.

I noticed that Bobby spread what looked like butter very thickly on the rough bread which we ate, and enjoyed it very much.

"This butter tastes very different," said Bobby. "But I like it." And he helped himself to it again.

"I could furnish the same, if I had the same tendency to get fat," said Bunny.

Just then the innkeeper came out, spoke to us politely and asked Bobby if he would like to see him lock up the stable for the night.

Of course Bobby would and out he went.

The sheep were all huddled in the yard, pushing against each other and baaing. They wanted to get into the stable and get to sleep.

"Aren't they fat fellows," said Bobby.

"Yes," I answered. "The wool makes them look very fat."

"But, Foxy Grandpa," said Bobby, "look at that fat lump on their backs and those very fat tails."

"They are fat," said I, regarding the sheep thoughtfully. Then we turned back and followed out Arabian host into the inn.

"Fine fat sheep," I commented.

"Yes," answered the man. "Very fat."

Now I thought this fellow rather stupid—merely repeating what I had said, until Bunny came up.

"What did you think of the fat-tailed sheep?" asked Bunny.

"Fine big fellows," I answered. "What are they?"

"Fat-tailed sheep," replied Bunny.

My, oh my! I thought. Is that all anybody can say?

"What breed are they?" I asked.

"Fat-tailed sheep," replied Bunny. "That butter that Bobby is so crazy about is that fat tail."

"Well I never. Now that I come to think of it, I believe they are the sheep mentioned in the Bible where it says:

"Also thou shalt take of the ram and the fat and the rump."

"Well," laughed Bunny, "Bobby certainly did."

He didn't stick a gun in the face of the surprised clerks, while his pal came in quietly, and rifled the tills. The cop on the outside continued to swing his club. The clerks totalled the registers. By B. C. Forbes

The fact is being clearly established by the communications received by this column that many railway employes do work seven days in the week and every week of the year. The best description yet received of railway conditions, as affecting certain classes of workers, is furnished by the general chairman of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, H. B. Morey. He writes, in part, as follows:

"Agents, assistant agents, telegraphers and towermen on the New York Central Railroad, Buffalo and East, are working under a contract with the order of railroad telegraphers, of which I am general chairman, the duly accredited representative of the employes.

"Time actually worked in excess of eight hours is paid for at the rate of time and a half. Unlike certain other classes of railroad employes, agents, telegraphers and towermen do not receive time and a half for service rendered on Sundays or holidays.

"The New York Central Railroad runs 365 days a year, and it goes without saying that there must be agents on duty on Sundays and holidays at the various stations to sell tickets to passengers and handle their baggage on and off trains.

"Not all of the agents, assistant agents and telegraphers are required to work a full eight hours on Sunday, but a very large majority are required to work all or a part of the day, and are paid only for the time actually worked.

"It is somewhat different with towermen or signalmen (synonymous terms). You open your article with the question: 'Do or do not many of those to whom we commit our safety when we travel work seven days a week and every week in the year?' The answer to your question is: 'Yes, they do.'

"I do not wish to convey the impression that every towerman works the entire 365 days of the year. Occasionally, because of sickness or a desire for recreation, these men do take a day off, but of course they lose the day's pay.

"There is no systematic relief provided for the employes in question, and therefore they do, generally speaking, work seven days a week and every week in the year.

"On the main line divisions of the New York Central, between New York and Buffalo, there are 558 towermen employed seven days a week and every week in the year.

"These towermen receive an average of 63.22 cents per hour. Let me state, however, that the average rate for agents, assistant agents, telegraphers and towermen, as a whole, is somewhat less than is paid to towermen on the main line divisions between New York and Buffalo, being 61.33 cents per hour."

Do you like to feel, as you sleep aboard a train for a journey, that the men who switch your train to safety or destruction work seven days in the week. Could you keep clear-headed if you worked every day of the week and every week of the year?

TAX SLASHING WOULD MEET WITH FAVOR

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

State and Wall streets are interested in advices from Washington to the effect that President Coolidge plans an extra session of Congress early in the Fall to effect tax reduction legislation.

The legislation, if favorable conditions prevail, it is said, will be made retroactive to January 1.

Numerous buying orders for stocks were reported placed as the result of this news, indicating in part with what general favor actual tax slashing would meet.

Some day a fairer system of taxation than the present will be devised. Taxation as evolved up to the present penalizes thrift unduly. For example, take the cases of two men who over a period of ten years receive a salary of $5,000 or more annually. One wastes his competence and at the end of the decade has nothing and so escapes taxation. The other saves and must pay taxes.

It has been suggested that taxes be levied almost entirely upon incomes rather than upon the results of thrift, but the whole problem is easier discussed than solved.

Many Americans apparently hold to the opinion that sterling's return to parity is a possibility—some think it a probability—in the very near future. The rather sensational recovery in foreign exchange has helped strengthen this belief among many citizens and financiers, but not among some of our shrewdest international bankers.

Bankers holding the view that it may be a year or more before the pound is stabilized at par are not overlooking the position of Great Britain's commerce, with the huge excess of imports.

Under normal conditions, such as prevailed prior to the war, this visible unfavorable trade balance (merchandise exclusively) would have been more than covered by the payments to Great Britain through invisible items. England as the banker of the world, and in her capacity as the great shipping nation and for other services rendered to the world, received substantial annual reimbursement. But her position has changed.

England is not now in a position to regulate even the sterling rate. This rate, according to well-informed bankers, is dependent in great degree upon the United States. Our investments in foreign lands and foreign securities play a major role in determining the foreign exchange rates of the entire world.

Bankers believe that under pressure sterling might return to par. But—and this is undoubtedly the factor restraining the English bankers from bringing this about—this accomplishment would create the even more difficult task of maintaining the pound at par. There's the rub.

One outstanding feature of Thursday's market was the 13 point jump in Mack Trucks shares to the new high record price of 134½. The strength in the stock, which was all the more noticeable because it continued right up to the close in the face of selling in other parts of the list, was accompanied by published reports that acquisition of the company by the General Motors Corporation has been the subject of recent discussions by interests in both companies.

One Wall Street paper even went so far as to state that "negotiations are understood to have reached the point where plans for a consolidation can be submitted for the approval of stockholders of the respective companies in the near future." Efforts to confirm this interesting piece of information, however, were not productive of satisfactory results. As a matter of fact, officials of both companies denied any knowledge of the suggested merger deal. Speaking for the General Motors Corporation Pierre S. du Pont, chairman of the board, said: "It is news to me, I know nothing about it."

SOUTHERN RY. JUMPS 3 TO NEW TOP

In New York trading, today a sharp rebound in prices of the oil, motor and industrial stocks took place immediately after the opening.

Most of the stocks which had been thrown overboard in Thursday's final scramble for profits were again under accumulation, and a number of railroad stocks, under the leadership of Southern Railway, displayed conspicuous strength.

Leading independent and Standard Oil shares showed a decided reversal of form from the last hour of Thursday. The Humble Oil Company announced another advance in gasoline prices, and the Gulf Oil Company marked prices a cent higher to correspond with the latest revision of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

New high price records for the move, which in many cases were the highest prices since 1923, were made by Sinclair at 24, Shell Union at 27½, Maracaibo at 23¼, Independent Oil and Gas at 20⅝, Royal Dutch above 56, Cosden at 33½.

Southern Railway sold up 3 points at 84½, the highest in its history.

Mack sold above 139 for a gain of five points as rumors persisted that this company was to be taken over by General Motors. Studebaker gained 1½ points in anticipation of a favorable annual report to be issued in about a week. Commercial Solvents gained another 10 points each.

American Woolen and American Sugar were not able to stage much of a comeback and United States Steel sold fractionally lower in most of its transactions.

Boston price changes were mostly narrow.

The "O. K." of the "Boss"

You Had to Have It, Before the Day of Direct Nominations

Little and big politicians who want to be the local or State bosses of their respective political parties continue to pound away at the principle of direct nominations. Here and there they receive some encouragement from partisan newspapers.

Neither party has a monopoly of these Diehards, who long for the "good old days" when caucuses attended by a comparatively few men, and run by two or three at the dictation of ONE, picked delegates to conventions which named the candidates for Governor.

In New Hampshire, a Republican editor calls for a return to caucus and convention because the direct primary gives a great advantage to the man of wealth. A recently defeated aspirant for the Democratic nomination for Governor likewise opposes nominations by the people.

There is similar clamor in Maine, here, however, with a suggestion that the proposal be SUBMITTED TO THE VOTERS.

Youthful legislators, with no personal knowledge of the "pink ticket" convention at Springfield, or the Floyd-Pillsbury-Churchill collision at Concord, may be glad to have at this time the views of a progressive so thoroughly representative as Mr. Charles Sumner Bird of Walpole, who says:

> "My position about the Direct Primary is that it is FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD CAUCUS, which was controlled by a political boss.
> "In the old days it was IMPOSSIBLE FOR ANYONE, HOWEVER ABLE AND WORTHY, to get his name on the ballot without the consent of the boss—either local or State."

The drive against the direct way of nominating candidates appears to be a concerted one. Friends of the popular method are advised to be on guard. The enemy has loads of experience, plenty of ammunition, an army of able fighting-men and something worth fighting for.

Perhaps the New Hampshire leader of the drive, when he can find the time, will print the names of the good men who were elected to the governorship of his State BEFORE the day of direct nominations. It can be done, we believe, in one line of type.

Japan Does Not Like Us

And Japan Is Making 500 Flying Machines a Month

If you suggest that the United States has need to interest itself in Japan's seventeen airplane factories, if you hint that Japan is turning out 500 fighting planes every month, you are severely upbraided.

Kind hearted missionaries, saving Japanese souls, tell you that you are a cruel Jingo trying to bring on war. And mushy pacifists in this country also rebuke you. They would be the first to dive down into the cellar if airships came flying over. They tell you it is wrong to harbor unkind thoughts of Japan.

NOBODY harbors any unkind THOUGHTS. The only suggestion is that this country ought to be ready for any UNKIND AIRPLANES that might come flying across the Pacific. According to the latest authority, the trip can be made now in 48 hours.

If you think that the Japanese are full of love and friendship, please read a paragraph printed in the Osaka Mainichi, as a welcome to Mr. Bancroft when he arrived in Japan as United States Ambassador.

The Mainichi has the biggest circulation in Japan, a circulation said to be as great as that of any newspaper in the United States.

How does this Japanese friendship welcoming an American Ambassador impress you? The Japanese editor writes:

> "Nearly all Japanese are not friendly toward the Americans. Even if we try to think more kindly of them we do not find ourselves able to do so."

It's all very well for us to be friendly with all nations. It's also well to have common sense.

People in this country ought to know how the Japanese feel, how they bitterly resent our suggestion that we have a right to reserve our own soil for our own people. We ought to devote some thought to the question.

Why are the Japanese building 500 fighting airplanes every month, and what is the United States going to do to meet the situation beside talking platitudes?

$390,000 for Water

Bridgewater Learns From Experience

Should the buildings of the State Normal School at Bridgewater be visited by another fire the town of Bridgewater will be prepared to fight it with its own water.

This is the first big and important result of the fire of early December, when the Commonwealth suffered a loss of $750,000 because the town was taking water from a private corporation and the supply was altogether inadequate.

Assembled in special town meeting, the citizens of Bridgewater have voted UNANIMOUSLY to take over the water plant at a cost of $175,000. They will spend $215,000 more to put it in shape.

When a community of 10,000 people assumes obligations of this amount it demonstrates its right to be the home of a teachers' college.

Some may say that Bridgewater should have made its move long ago, but towns, like men, frequently learn their lessons from Experience, whose school is proverbially expensive.

The Texas Lady Governor

Pioneer Ideals.

Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, Governor of Texas, at her inauguration makes a speech only seven minutes long, and urges loyalty "to pioneer ideals."

Women make shorter speeches than men, and they mean what they say more often than men do.

The pioneer ideals to which Mrs. Ferguson refers included the courage and devotion of the early Americans that created out of what once was Mexican soil the magnificent State of Texas. The nation owes much to those Texas pioneers, their ideals and their fighting qualities.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

OUTSIDE of a plucked eyebrow, there is nothing on earth narrower than the notions of a man in love.

Every man is at heart a "sweet, old-fashioned man" with ideals as set and mid-Victorian as a pair of pink shepherdesses.

Helen Rowland

There is no such thing as a "modern man." When it comes to love, they are all 'way back in the Garden of Eden with Adam.

A man MAY, sometimes, "fall for" an ultra modern jazz girl—but in that same moment he falls upon her cigarette, her lipstick and all her modernisms and tries to break her of them.

As long as a man admires and applauds your wild ways, he is only playing; but when he begins to REFORM you, it's real love.

He may have been attracted by your snappy slang and your casual settings; but the moment his heart comes into action his modernism has a reaction.

A profane word from the lips of a girl he has just met may sound merely "cute and daring;" but a "damn" from the lips of a woman he has begun to love grates on his finer sensibilities, like the squawk of a parrot from the throat of a canary.

As long as a girl is only an adventure in his life, she may pass her kisses around like chocolate fudge; but when she becomes a heart-interest he turns conservative and begins to believe in monopoly.

Daring clothes, high art faces and rolled stockings may catch his eye—but, in the woman he LOVES they merely offend it.

Never conclude that a man loves you as long as he flatters you and approves of you—wait until he begins to criticise you.

A man has awfully high moral and social standards—for his OWN woman, or the woman he wants to "own."

Every man loves a "LADY."

Women and times and manners may change; but a man's romantic ideals, thank Heaven, will never change!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Thanks from P. O. Clerks

Editor Boston American:

On behalf of the Boston Federation Post Office Clerks, representing the 15,000 or more clerks in the Boston Postal District I desire to thank you for the splendid, unselfish support—editorially and otherwise—which your newspaper rendered our cause during the recent campaign to restore postal efficiency by granting long-deferred, favorable wage readjustments to postal employes.

Although disappointed, temporarily, with the failure of the United States Congress to vote on January 6, 1925, as it did on May 27, 1924, nevertheless, we are confident that our present inadequate [illegible] schedule will shortly be favorably revised.

It is indeed a source of gratification for us to know that an outstanding publication, such as the Boston American, realizes the somewhat unfortunate plight of postal employes regarding wages, and that you are continually calling the attention of the public and the Congress to this lamentable fact. Such devotedness to a principle affecting the welfare of the American people, is to be commended and will eventually bring the desired results.

W. A. COLLINS, Secretary,
Local No. 100, Boston.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

THE dawn is near, the opal-tinted dawn that, while the solemn centuries march on, still brings its gift to souls that drift, to weary hearts whence hope and faith are gone. Although at eve with sad, reluctant feet man treads the dismal pathway of defeat, with morn's bright gleam on hill and stream, he finds the message of the dawn is sweet. The dawn is near . . . from every eastern slope the mists draw back, the vanquished shadows grope; the glad sky glows with pearl and rose and in the heart there beams a dawn of hope!

THE LIFE STORY OF GOMPERS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

SAMUEL GOMPERS was the president of the American Federation of Labor.

He recently died, and his death was the occasion of a great display of public appreciation.

He was born in England in 1850. He was a cigarmaker by trade, and one of the founders of the American Federation of Labor in 1886. For the thirty-eighth time he had just been elected to its presidency at the convention held at El Paso, Texas.

The rise of this English Jewish boy to a position of great prominence in the world is significant apart from whether one believe in his ideas or not. No one but a man who is really great could make such a rise and achieve the commanding position he occupied in the last forty-three years of his life.

He was opposed to strikes, and avoided them whenever he could do so wisely.

He was a conservative in his unbending adherence to trade unionism pure and simple. He was usually understood as being opposed to all sorts of radicalism.

It was largely through his efforts that the American Federation of Labor has replaced the Knights of Labor, which now is only a memory.

He succeeded in getting many laws passed by Congress and State Legislatures for the betterment of labor conditions.

He held to the very last his authority over his organization.

He had no idea as to what would be the permanent settlement of the labor question. He accepted things as he found them—that there was an eternal conflict between Capital and Labor, and he was on the side of the laboring man.

Once, when Morrison, his lieutenant, was asked: "What are you going to do with all this growing power of organized labor? To what ultimate end are you working?" he replied: "God only knows; I don't."

Gompers never made any attempt to lead men any further than they could see. He never lost himself in economic speculation. He was essentially a craftsman, for he took things as he found them and worked for immediate results.

All his career he opposed Communism and Bolshevism. He also opposed the institution of labor banks and the ownership of productive enterprise by labor. He was opposed to prohibition, and worked actively against the adoption of the Volstead law.

Opinion as to the value of his character and work will be divided. But there is no difference of opinion as to the essential greatness of the man.

On the whole, he was a sane, conservative and constructive labor leader, and his place will be a very hard one to fill.

It is significant that the man who thus united behind himself the majority of the labor forces was not an American. He was an Englishman and a Jew.

THE EARTH TRAVELS IN ETHER

By Garrett P. Serviss.

"Is any one point on the earth's surface traveling through space, or the ether, if the ether is endless, at the same rate of speed during the entire twenty-four hours of the day?"

NO. For one reason because the earth's speed in its orbit around the sun is not uniform—though not varying to a great extent in a single day—and for another reason because the earth's rotation on its axis causes the speed of different parts of its surface to be different at different hours of the day.

The fact is that we are doing a reeling dance in space of which we are, fortunately for our comfort, aware only by calculation and not at all by sensation. The curious effect of the earth's rotation, which varies at different points—and which, it is conceivable, may some time or other prove of unexpected interest—can be clearly shown.

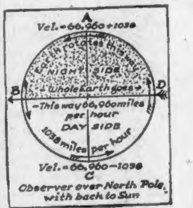
We see the earth as it would be presented to the eyes of an observer suspended over the north terrestrial pole, with his back toward the sun, and looking down upon the rotating globe beneath him. The motion of the earth in its orbit, as well as its motion of rotation about its axis, are both from his right toward his left hand.

The orbital velocity of the earth, represented by the large arrow through the centre, is 66,960 miles per hour at the equator. The rotational velocity of the earth, represented by the small arrow, is 1,038 miles per hour at the equator.

Consider the four points on the equator marked A, B, C, D. At A, in the middle of the night side of the earth, the speed with which a person standing there would be moving through the motionless ether, in the direction of the earth's orbital revolution, or a tangent to the orbit, is 66,960 plus 1,038 miles, which equals 67,998 miles per hour.

Next consider the point C in the middle of the day side of the earth. The speed with which a person standing there would be moving, for an instant, in the direction of the earth's orbital revolution is 66,960—1038, which equals only 65,922 miles per hour. So the night speed is 2076 miles faster than the day speed.

If we consider the point B, where the sun is just rising, we find that the rotational motion is at a right angle to the orbital motion, so that there is no combination as far as the speed through the ether in the direction of the earth's revolution is concerned. It is neither faster nor slower in consequence of the rotation.



Finally at the point D, where the sun is just setting, we have the same conditions as at B, i.e., the speed of rotation does not combine either positively or negatively with that of revolution.

All the way from D through A to B, the rotational speed has a component which adds to the revolutional speed, reaching a maximum at A; and all the way from B through C to D, the rotational speed has a component which subtracts from the revolutional speed, with a maximum at C.

ONCE-OVERS

DON'T LET YOUR SYMPATHY OUTWEIGH YOUR WISDOM

"I would not stand for it. Why don't you quit?"

Many a married man has heard this remark sometime in his life, made by his life partner when he relates some of the embarrassing situations which are bound to come up, but which he thinks he has to "put up with."

Undoubtedly there are men who have given up at the suggestion of a wife who is more sympathetic than wise on such occasions.

But there are too manay thoughtless wives who are long on advice of this sort, but if it comes to losing a job and not finding another at once, they complain bitterly because Friend Husband acted on their advice.

It is so easy for your wife to say, "Quit, we will get along someway."

But the man of pride does not relish the thought of his family "getting along someway or somehow."

The man of rightful pride wants his family comfortably and becomingly clothed and housed, with as many conveniences as he can get while steadily employed and he knows that every break in the line of steady employment is a loss.
